Greeks Drive Italians Back Into Albania

RING FASCIST BASE AND TAKE 1,200 CAPTIVE

Fall of Koritza, In Northern Theater of War, Reported To Be Imminent.

ROME ADMITS DIFFICULTY

Reports of Sea Battle West of Corfu Sends Italian Ship Fleeing, Reports Say.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(INS)—Thirty thousand Italian troops threatening the Greek industrial city of Janina have been cut off by a Greek guerilla band headed by a famous mountain leader named Varda, Reuter's reported from Belgrade today.

(By Associated Press)

Fighting over snow-blanketed mountains, Greek Alpine troops were reported to have driven seven miles into Italian-held Albania today, ringing the Fascist supply base at Koritza and capturing 1,200 Italian prisoners.

Dispatches from Yugoslavia said the fall of Koritza, in the northern sector of the 100-mile Balkan war front, was "expected momentarily."

In the southern sector, Greek defenders were said to have repulsed Italian columns in fierce hand-to-hand fighting with bayonets and grenades.

The Greek high command said a heavy Italian attack in the mountains of Epirus province, preceded by 15 consecutive bombing forays against Greek defense positions, had been routed with the destruction of nine Fascist tanks.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, acknowledged that Premier Mussolini's legions were meeting stiff Greek resistance in the Ioannina (Janina) region at the southwest end of the front.

A Stefani war correspondent reported that the Italian invaders had "entered Greek territory varying distances," and he added:

"The Italian advance failed to acquire lightning rhythm because of bad weather prevailing for several days and because of bad roads. . . . Swampy strips interrupted here and there by dynamite mines exploded by the Greek rear guard."

The Greeks, he said, were fighting with British and French artil-

Neighbors Fight Forest Fire After Ranger Sees Blaze

A forest fire on the Kate Ackerman farm, south of Loudonville on the Bali-Ally road yesterday afternoon swept through four acres of timber before being brought under control by volunteer firemen.

The blaze was discovered shortly before 3 p. m. by James Stevenson, state forest ranger, from his lookout tower at Mohican state park

Stevenson summoned about 30 neighbors, supplying them with fire fighting equipment used by the CCC unit at the park. Several back fires were started and two hours later the blaze was brought under control.

Stevenson said he believed the fire was started from a lighted cigaret tossed from an automobile by a passing motorist.

Tomorrow---Day of Decision

(EDITORIAL)

WHATEVER else you do tomorrow, do not neglect or forget to VOTE!

Many people who fully intend to vote fail to do so because they do not plan ahead to visit the polls. Some "put it off" in the morning, intending to vote in the afternoon, then forget about it for awhile—and the 6:30 closing time rolls around before they realize it.

Best, for the men and women who can arrange to do so, is to vote before noon—as soon after the 6:30 opening time as possible—so as to avoid later crowds of citizens unable to vote earlier.

Voting is not only a privilege which is enjoyed by very few countries in the world—it is an obligation of citizenship in a democracy where orderly self government is preserved by acceptance of majority decisions expressed on election day.

And remember, when you vote tomorrow, it is your privilege to mark your ballot as you choose. Nobody has a right to TELL you how to vote and you are under no obligation to anyone to tell them how you voted.

Charges have been made that certain groups of voters were told HOW to vote, and in some boss-ridden cities this has been common practice for many years, but the fact remains that every American citizen qualified to vote is entitled to decide for himself or herself, and to vote in accordance with conscience and judgment.

And so, this final word, on the eve of one of the most important national elections ever held in the United States: "Vote as you please, but VOTE!"

Draft Questionnaires to Be Placed In Mail Today

Three Local Boards Receive Master Lists of Order Numbers Ahead of Schedule, Begin Check.

Receiving their master lists of draft registrants for Richland county before they expected them, the county's three draft boards prepared today to send out the first questionnaires to registrants tonight or Tuesday.

The master lists, showing the order in which numbers were drawn from the big bowl in Washington last Tuesday, arrived this morning. The boards went to work immediately compiling their own lists, marking off all the numbers that are above the highest in Richland county since they do not apply here.

Clerks of the county boards said the first questionnaires probably would be addressed this afternoon and placed in the mail, by towns, tonight. Only a few of them will be sent at first, since the county will be required to furnish only nine men in the first conscription call Nov. 19.

A maximum of 50 of the questionnaires will be mailed in any one day so that the advisory boards can help registrants fill out the blanks and answer questions about them. Too many blanks out at one time would make it impossible for the advisory boards to help all of the registrants get their blanks returned within the five-day limit.

The blanks include questions pertaining to the registrant's work, physical condition, and dependents.

From information contained in the blanks when they are returned to the draft boards, registrants will be classified for military service. Those placed in the No. 1 classification will be called to camp first. Others will be deferred.

BRINGS REPLY

French Ambassador Sees Hull, Answers U. S. Query.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The French ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye today delivered to Secretary of State Cordell Hull Marshal Henry Petain's reply to President Roosevelt's recent personal message.

Before entering Hull's office, Henry-Haye told newspapermen that he was delivering to Hull the reply of the head of the French government at Vichy to President Roosevelt's recent message.

He declined to reveal the contents of the reply, or to discuss the message.

After seeing Hull, the ambassador conferred with Undersecretary Sumner Wells for a general discussion of the Franco-American relations.

CLEVELAND GETS U. S. FOOD STAMPS

25,000 Relief Families To Get Federal Surplus Food.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— The federal government's food stamp plan was inaugurated in Cleveland today, with 25,000 families on city, county and soldiers' and sailors' relief being issued orange and blue food stamps at four relief stations.

Later this month 10,000 other families receiving pension checks under the social security program will share in the plan. Blue stamps will be good for surplus commodities after the orange stamps are used.

It was estimated that Cleveland food merchants will realize $3,000,000 of new annual income from the more ample food budget allowed.

BOWLING GREEN—(INS)—Funeral arrangements were made today for 13-year-old Jeanne Pratt, daughter of a former sheriff of Wood county, who was burned to death when her nightclothing caught fire as she stood before an open grate.

Party And Extra Will Bring You Fast Election Coverage

With some 55,000,000 Americans preparing to march to the polls tomorrow, The News-Journal today was putting last-minute touches on its election-covering organizations, preparatory to furnishing Mansfield with speedy, accurate and complete election information.

Two methods will be employed to keep Mansfielders informed of the trend in the voting.

There will be the usual election night party at The News-Journal office, with election returns of all major races from president on down through county contests being flashed on the now-famous silver screen.

And there will be an election extra, which will be on the streets about 6 a. m. Wednesday, an hour at which the results of the nation's balloting should be definitely known.

Besides its own tabulating organization, which will tabulate and flash on the screen the Richland county vote on all contests, The News-Journal will have the services of the Associated Press, to bring to its election party guests and readers the result of the voting in the nation, from coast to coast.

Since presidential ballots are to be counted first, returns on that contest start coming in shortly after 7 p. m. And The News-Journal screen will be the place to get the results as fast as they are available.

Come on down and join the party!

BOARD PROBES CIRCULATION OF PARTY BALLOTS

'Official' Copies Are Found Being Distributed For Clerk Candidate.

KNOWLEDGE DISCLAIMED

Wenning Says He Knew Nothing of Action Until Told By His Friends.

The Richland county board of elections today was investigating the circulating of exact copies of official party ballots as samples in behalf of the campaign of Howard Wenning, Democratic candidate for county clerk of courts.

Learning that a number of the ballots were distributed in Mansfield this morning, the board called in police and sheriff's deputies to help locate all of the "samples" and sought to find where they were printed.

Wenning said he knew nothing of the ballots until friends told him about them. He said they apparently were distributed by William H. Hipp, his father-in-law, who offered to help him with his campaign.

Located at Shiloh shortly after noon today by Sheriff E. P. Long, Hipp said about 600 of the ballots were given to him by an employe of the Mansfield firm which printed the ballots.

The printing firm worker, whom Hipp declined to name, told him the ballots were "not official because the stub at the top was cut off."

Hipp said he had "possibly 200 of them" distributed in Mansfield and gave out six or seven himself in the northern part of the county. Hipp and the workers he employed to help him distribute them went with officers to the places where the ballots were taken and it was believed most of them were recovered.

"I wanted to surprise Wenning by distributing them, and he didn't know anything about them," Hipp told The News-Journal.

The ship was due at Salt Lake at 5:39 a. m. (EST).

URGES 8-YEAR TENURE LIMIT

Willkie Proposes Constitutional Ban Against More Than 2-Terms as President.

By THEODORE F. KOOP

NEW YORK—(AP)—On the eve of the first presidential election in which a third-term bid has been made, Wendell L. Willkie proposed today a constitutional amendment limiting the service of any president to eight years or less.

Before making three last minute radio appeals to the American voters, the Republican presidential nominee said in a statement that if the "common law against a third term be repealed," there would be no law to restrain President Roosevelt "or any of his successors, elected, hereditary or appointed, from any indefinite number of terms."

"When elected," Willkie said, "in order to prevent any subsequent demonstrations of such ambitious views, in my first message to congress I shall recommend that they submit a constitutional amendment limiting the time any one president may serve to eight years or less."

In another statement calling on all voters to take part in tomorrow's election, Willkie reiterated a declaration made to the Republican national convention and to Saturday night's Madison Square Garden rally.

"I stand before you without a single pledge, promise or understanding of any kind," he said.

WOODLAND HOUSE NUMBERS STOLEN

And Residents Don't Care For This Type of Celebration.

People in Mansfield celebrated Halloween in a number of ways Thursday, but at least one of the methods wasn't appreciated by residents of the Woodland section.

Over the week-end, Woodland residents began to miss house number reflectors from their lawns. A check-up revealed that nearly every one who owned one of the reflectors had had it stolen.

According to one resident the reflectors had been purchased by a large group of Woodlanders from a salesman this fall at a fancy price.

KILL INTRUDER

Officers Surprise Man In Grill; Shoot as He Flees.

COLUMBUS (AP)—Two policemen shot and killed a man whom they surprised in an East Side grill early today.

Sgt. Joseph Knight and Patrolman Delbert Wilkins were making a special check in an effort to halt a wave of burglaries in the neighborhood when they noticed a man rifling showcases in the grill. Both policemen opened fire when the intruder failed to heed their commands to halt.

Police identified the victim as Floyd Nelson, 35.

ROOSEVELT IN FINAL APPEALS

Arrives at Hyde Park, Makes Six Neighborhood Talks; On Radio Tonight.

By GEORGE DURNO

HYDE PARK, N. Y. — (INS) — Fighting to the last minute for the vote of confidence that will keep him in the White House for an unprecedented third term, President Roosevelt returned to his Hyde Park home today to make half a dozen speeches in four normally Republican counties of mid-Hudson New York.

His campaign special arrived at Hyde Park at 9:30 a. m. The chief executive motored immediately to his family home for a brief rest preliminary to making his final thrust at the candidacy of G. O. P. candidate Wendell Willkie.

Following the pattern that won him victory in 1932 and 1936, the president will spend the day campaigning through the mid-Hudson counties which are represented in congress by Hamilton Fish, ranking G. O. P. member of the house foreign affairs committee, and

In October, 1939, there were 164 cars and 14 trucks sold. While last month's sales represented a marked gain over either of the two preceding months, the month ranked fifth this year in total sales March, April, May, and June showed higher totals, with April heading the list with 350 new cars and 42 new trucks.

Both Parties Claim Victory In Close Race

Willkie And Roosevelt to Make Final Appeals Tonight; 50 Millions Go To Polls Tomorrow to Vote In Hot National Election.

(By Associated Press)

The turbulent and unpredictable 1940 presidential campaign came to the end of the trail today amid a tumult of rival claims, political oratory and urgent last minute appeals for votes.

The crowded closing hours held little in keeping with the old tradition of a quiet election eve. Apart from the final messages which President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie were to make to the electorate, both Democratic and Republican parties marshalled speakers, national and local, for a series of eleventh hour broadsides.

Mr. Roosevelt, back in New York where he will receive the returns tomorrow night at his Hyde Park home, set aside his day for campaigning among his Hudson valley neighbors, very much as he did on the eve of the 1936 election.

His final message to the electorate will highlight the two hour nation-wide radio program (NBC, CBS, MBC) from 10 p. m. to midnight, EST) arranged by the Democratic national committee. Mr. Roosevelt will speak from Hyde Park shortly after 11 p. m. Henry A. Wallace, his partner on the ticket, also will make a final address.

At first it was thought Mr. Roosevelt might use the occasion for another major political address, but this belief was discounted after his assertion at Cleveland Saturday night that he was then making his "final national address of the campaign." Present expectations were that he would simply urge all eligible voters to exercise their franchise tomorrow.

Willkie, winding up his strenuous, marathon campaign, had three radio speaking engagements on his election eve schedule. The first was his closing speech to the women of America (CBS 3:15 p. m.) Then he will take to the air again (CBS 10:15 p. m. with Senator McNary of Oregon, his running mate, and return to the networks for his last word in an hour long program (over all major chains) ending at 1 a. m. election day.

The character of Willkie's three final addresses was not indicated. Aides said the subject matter might depend on what Democratic orators had to say previously, or on other developments. For the most part, however, the Republican nominee was looking forward to a comparatively quiet day.

Election eve found no dearth of the usual contradictory forecasts of victory. Although record-breaking registrations, cross-currents and the like made for unusual uncertainty, predictions were as confident as ever.

Democratic National Chairman Flynn first predicted a minimum

Generally Fair For Election Day

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Voters in most of the country probably will have fair skies on election day, but there may be occasional rain in some central and eastern sections.

The weather bureau, in a special forecast, said that light rains might fall during daylight hours in portions of the middle and lower Mississippi valley, in the region bordering on the Great Lakes and in parts of the West Gulf states and Southern Plains.

In the North Atlantic states, the forecast stated, rain was not likely until election night.

CLOSE: Torrid Ohio Races Due To Call Out Record Vote

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — The tumultuous 1940 presidential campaign in Ohio, tense with issues as vital as ever confronted the nation, pushed toward a decision today.

Campaign orators continued their exhortions and hammering on the pleas for votes right up to election eve.

But the issues were joined at last and an electric atmosphere of questioning expectancy and doubt charged the state.

Three million and a quarter voters, more than ever voted in the Buckeye state, were expected to write the answer so far as Ohio is concerned in the quiet of the voting booths between 6:30 a. m., and 6:30 p. m. Tuesday.

As the majority dictates, so goes Ohio's 26 electoral votes in the presidential election and whether those votes would be for President Roosevelt or Wendell L. Willkie, few cared to assert with confidence in advance.

The state has always been a pivotal one in a close election and its vote has been given to the favorite in the nation as a whole in every presidential election since 1892.

To many observers the contest resolved itself basically into the question whether Mr. Roosevelt by the strength of pluralities in the urban centers could hold the state to his cause—as he did four and eight years ago—or whether a drop in his popularity in those sections combined with an expected outpouring of Republican votes from the farms and county seat towns could swing Ohio to Willkie.

Republican and Democratic leaders alike remained outwardly calm and confident. Privately they too confessed the probability of a very close vote with the smallest of the state's 8675 precincts po-

WIND-UP: Parties End Drive For County's Biggest Vote

Richland county's liveliest political campaign in years was drawing to a close today, while election officials predicted a record number of voters will go to the polls tomorrow to elect a slate of officials from a president to county coroner.

Both parties in the county wound up their campaigns over the week-end, with Democrats having the "last say" at a rally of the Italian-American Democratic club Sunday afternoon.

Despite a forecast of showers for Tuesday, an all-time high vote of at least 35,000 in Richland county and 5,015,000 in Ohio was predicted today by county and state election officials.

With the nation voting for the first time in its history on a third term for a president, most of the interest in the campaign has centered around the presidential race. The heated debating over that issue alone is believed responsible for the unprecedented vote forecast for tomorrow.

In Richland county, every county official except the auditor and one commissioner will be elected Tuesday. An auditor and commissioner were chosen two years ago for four-year terms.

In addition, county voters will ballot for president, governor and a complete slate of state officials, a 17th district congressman, U. S. senator to fill the post to be vacated in January by Senator Vic Donahey, two state senators in the 27th-29th district, a state representative, three Ohio Supreme court judges, a Fifth district ap-

BRIGHT WEEK-END GIVES EXCUSE FOR OUTINGS

Mansfield Area Jammed With Motorists On Pleasure Jaunts; Clinic Announces New Ticket Headquarters.

By FRANCES E. GENSLEY

WITH the weather staying bright and clear in spite of the arrival of November, roads in the Mansfield area were packed yesterday, and a great many persons took advantage of the season to make week-end jaunts to cities near and far. What with the football game between Ohio State and Indiana to attract the fans to Columbus, the N. E. O. T. A., the arrival of President Roosevelt for a speech, and the presence of Fritz Kriesler, world-famous violinist, in Cleveland kept Route 42 buzzing from late Thursday until early today.

But here it is another Monday, and we all have our respective duties to face, so let's see what the week-end offered in the way of information for the society page readers.

Here is something of particular importance that we must call to your attention. Those of you who were missed in the first ticket drive, or who were out of the city and did not obtain ducats for the book review-movie programs being sponsored by the Dental clinic may obtain tickets for the final programs at the Book Shop on West Third street.

The next review will be given at 1 p. m. Wednesday at the Ohio theater with the current movie attraction being shown following the review. Mrs. Margaret Rowland, Cleveland, will give "The Family" by Nina Sedrova. For the final program of the year Dorothy Fuldheim will give "For Whom the Bells Toll" by Ernest Hemingway. Her review will be presented Nov. 27.

Proceeds from the sale of tickets by clinic representatives will be used to provide dental care for Mansfield's indigent children.

Informally Speaking...

Nov. 4, 1940.

Lucy, dear:

THIS is indeed a beautiful day, and if the weatherman gives us another one like it tomorrow, it will be just about the first election day in the history of the city that it hasn't poured down rain. But regardless of the weather, I think we can feel pretty sure that everyone will be out to vote, because I do believe this has been the hottest election campaign since the one of Al Smith and Herbert Hoover.

The week-end just past has been a most important one for Joan Davey, daughter of Mrs John Davey, as she went to New York City last Friday to visit with her two sisters, Martha Davey and Mrs. Hergert Endly (the former Elizabeth Davey). . . . Martha, you know, is employed there now in a Fifth avenue store. . . . She and Joan went to the University of Pennsylvania-Navy football game in Philadelphia Saturday and then attended the Penn Junior Prom that evening. . . . They also were entertained at the Phi Delta Theta fraternity house during their stay. . . . Then went back to New York yesterday. . . . Oh yes, and this is the Endly's daughter, Sally's, first birthday anniversary—so there was much celebration on that occasion too.

AND speaking of collegians, Delores Lee has been chosen vice president of the Fine Arts club at Ashland college. . . . But Delores isn't the only Mansfielder figuring in the news over at Ashland college now. . . . Frank Subich is among the initiates of the Gooch club, a science group at the school. Virginia Au of this city was on the initiation committee, while Rosemary Imhoff served on the refreshment committe.

The morning mail brought a card all the way from Hawaii. . . . It was from Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Fisher and daughter, who are residing in one of the cottages of the Pua-Lei-Lani hotel on the beach at Waikiki—and certainly enough to make the most contented of us snow-lovers a bit envious as the cold winter months loom up ahead.

KENNAGENE VERMILYA, who's a freshman down at Ohio Wesleyan university in Delaware, was in town visiting with relatives over the week-end. . . . She was accompanied by a school friend, Jean Fisher. . . . Other week-end visitors in the city were Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Rudolph and their son, Jimmy, and Mr. and Mrs. William E. Owens of Cincinnati, and C. Maxwell Rudolph of Grafton, all guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Rudolph on Louise avenue. . . . Margaret DeWitt and Margaret Bird were in Washington, D. C. for several days at the end of last week. . . . They saw Vangelene Cook, who teaches there now, and visited in some of the city schools.

AND that seems to be just about that so far as news is concerned today, Lucy, so I'll write again next week. . . . In the meantime, let me hear from you.

GLASS CAPITAL

Toledo, O., which was the world's capital of fine crystal blowing back in the 1890's when cutglass was internationally famous, is again coming into the limelight as the great glass blowing center. A few years after the turn of the century the glass factories became more interested in machine-made glass, and the art of blowing fine crystal passed to Europe. Now, however, all sources of fine Swedish and Czechoslovakian glass are cut off, and skilled blowers are once more making their way back to Toledo. And so the rekindling of the fires of this ancient art, which goes back to classical times, marks the upswing of an important industry in the making of fine modern American glass.

THE WORLD IS LIKE THAT + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1940)

CHAPTER XXIX.

Ned, of course, came back to dinner. They sat down fourteen to a wild meal of not enough of any one thing to go around, but of plentiful variety. Aunt Nell had expected only seven of them. Jocelyn sat next to her aunt, and gathered details of family news under cover of the wedding chatter.

Aunt Nell paid but a kindly, indifferent attention to such portions of the news from Hill Acres as Jocelyn chose to give her. Norma was going to Honolulu with her mother, was she? Never mind, Jocelyn, you'll get your chance another time, dear. Jocelyn could see that her aunt's mind was already working on the number of presentable napkins that the family could rally for the wedding, the probability that there must be overnight provision for Ned's folks, who lived in Portland.

"Sis," Jocelyn said, "why not have Miss Snyder tighten the upper part of your bridesmaids' skirts and sort of full out the lower part and put rick-rack braid all around? That's what I saw at the Freeman wedding last month, and it was awfully smart."

"Oh, Jocelyn, that sounds like an inspiration!"

"I gave Tots three hundred, and I'll give you three hundred," said the doctor, "but anyone who asks me for more wrings my old carcass dry!"

"Daddy, what an angel you are!"

"Ned wired his mother this afternoon, Mom."

"Sis, don't have it Thursday. Have it Saturday and then all the boys can come."

It was all so good, Jocelyn thought, and so good for her. This joyous, wholesome home talk; these pretty eager sisters outvying each other in suggestions and generosities in some way had the effect of soothing her spirits. These were her own people; this was the world in which to find realities and peace.

After dinner everyone but the brides-elect, Tots and Sissy, who were already planning the newspaper notices that should dignify them into Madeleine and Ellen, flew upstairs to find the bridesmaids' dresses of two years ago, and see what their possibilities were. The other attacked the dishes, put the dining room in order, and were ready with suggestions when the yonger girls came downstairs wearing the discussed garments, prepared for criticism

Jocelyn crouched on the floor at her cousin's knee.

"Look, Aunt Nell. A row of fine tucks, see, to lift it? and then chiffon, fluffing out—"

She had gotten so far when a voice from the open parlor doorway said mildly, "What goes on?"

The world turned upside down in a burst of stars. Her heart stood still, began to race deliriously. She scrambled to her feet, laughing, exquisite, her face April. Philip Fordyce came into the room.

"'The Dancing Lesson,' by Degas," he said, on a rising inflection. They all laughed, and the girls, more like a high tide of roses than ever, clustered about him and explained that while they had been absorbed in the thrill of Tot's approaching wedding, quite suddenly little Sissy had taken the center of the stage. Eighteen days to her wedding!

Philip entered into the spirit of the occasion wholeheartedly. He took out a notebook and said that if Tots and Sissy had picked their silver patterns yet he would send them each a berry spoon.

"Everyone gets berry spoons," he told them seriously, "and everyone thinks they are perfectly useless. But believe me you can do wonders with a berry spoon. Mush, you know," elaborated Philip, "and milk toast."

They were all in such spirits anyway that they found this irresistibly amusing, and Jocelyn's sweet liquid laughter had in it a note that, for some reason she could not understand, brought tears to her aunt's eyes.

Just how she knew not—for everything had gone rosy and bewildering and vaporous and she was hardly conscious of what she said or did—Jocelyn found herself and Philip Fordyce wandering down the steep garden paths to the side gate, and standing there in the dusk.

"I came to say I'm sorry it all broke like this," said Philip. "I telephoned home today to get in touch with you, and found you'd gone. I don't blame you. I know you're angry. But I wanted to say that I'm sorry."

"I'm not angry," said Jocelyn. "I came away because Miss Sanderson didn't leave me in any doubt that that was what I was expected to do. She was kind enough to say she'd say good-bye to you for me."

"Sandy," he said thoughtfully, and for a minute he did not speak again. "Jocelyn," he went on then, "what did they tell you?"

"Why, when you all went to the club last night—" she was beginning, when he interrupted her.

"Clubs," he said briefly.

"Didn't you go to the country club?" she stammered.

"With all of them?" he demanded in turn, equally amazed.

She said you did.

"Sandy did?"

"Well, she may not have said it in so many words. But she said—she certainly implied, that you and the countess were friends again—"

"Friends again!" he interposed on an impatient laugh, as she hesitated. "My dear girl, we've been divorced for fourteen years, and in all that time she hasn't made a friendly gesture toward me! There can't be any talk of a reconciliation between Janet and me: it would be absurd! If I was angry when she walked out on me and my mother and a little girl of two, fifteen year sago, I've had cause to be a hundred times angrier since. She kidnaped Norma—oh, we kept it out of the papers, but that was what it amounted to. She left her in Paris with three nurses and five doctors, down with scarlet fever, and went with friends to Cairo.

"I didn't," he added in a more moderate tone, as Jocelyn merely waited in silence, her eyes starry in strengthening moonlight. "I didn't want even to be in the house with Janet overnight. They were all planning to go to the club. I went into town to my club and stayed there. You knew that?"

"No, I—I didn't know that." Suddenly she felt weak and small and helpless, and putting her elbows on the gate rail and covering her face with her hands she began to cry.

Instantly his arms were about her. His kisses on her mouth, his words close to her ear, her whole crying, laughing self leaning against him, safe in his big hold—never had she known such a heaven of ecstasy.

Presently Jocelyn could dry her eyes, and listen and laugh and cry, although she was still shy of words.

"And her coming doesn't make any difference?"

"Why should it? It makes this difference," Philip admitted on second thought, "that we don't go to Honolulu Saturday. She'll probably go and take Norma. And after they're gone we'll be married. You'll come down and visit my mother, and we'll have a little dinner for the few people who matter, and after that we'll be married."

"Oh, but your mother'll hate me!"

HOW TO GET A

$100 LOAN

IN 24 HOURS

No endorsers or guarantors needed—No credit questions asked of friends or relatives—Monthly payments to fit your income—Quick, friendly service

WOULD you like to get a cash loan without having to ask friends or relatives for a favor? At Household Finance you can borrow $20 to $500—without endorsers or guarantors—if you can make small monthly payments on your loan. We require no stocks or bonds. At Household Finance you borrow on your own signature; your friends are not asked to sign the papers with you.

Choose your own payment plan

See, in the table below, how you may repay your loan in convenient monthly installments which fit your own income. You may repay in small installments spread over 30 months. Or you may repay sooner to reduce the charges.

Suppose that you need a $100 loan. You find this amount in the first column of the table. Then read across picking out the monthly payment which you wish to make. You will see, for instance, that monthly installments of $9.16 each will repay a $100 loan in full in 12 months. Or, if you wish smaller payments, as little as $4.46 a month for 30 months will also repay a $100 loan.

Some rate to everyone

Installments in the table cover everything. They include charges at Household's rate of 2% per month on that part of a balance not exceeding $300 and 1½% per month on that part of a balance in excess of $300. This rate is less than the maximum prescribed by the Small Loan Law. Household has this one rate—the same for persons whether new customer or former borrower.

No one else need know

When you borrow at Household, there's no need to ask friends or fellow workers to sign the loan papers with you. Loans are made on furniture, car or note.) So far your loan may remain your private affair, we do not ask friends or relatives about your credit. If you should be faced with sickness or unemployment while paying on a loan, Household will show you every consideration. Last year we foreclosed on only one chattel mortgage for each 20,000 loans—an action taken then only as protection against fraud.

If a loan will help you, you are invited to look at the table again. Then phone or visit us for further information. You will be under no obligation to borrow.

Hunt for Accused Ohio Shotgun Killer In Three States

SEARCH PARTY FINDS VICTIM'S BODY IN PIT

First Degree Murder Charged By Sheriff as He Learns Details of Shooting.

(By Associated Press)

JEFFERSON, O. — Police of three states sought Goodrich McCourt, 21, today on a charge of first degree murder of Andy Jana, 18, who was slain with a shotgun in a gravel pit 15 miles southeast of here.

Prosecutor Ward Cross charged McCourt with murder after learning he had quarreled with his 18-year-old fiancee, accusing her of going with Jana and another youth, which she denied.

All lived on farms near Richmond Center.

Cross said he learned McCourt asked Jana to "go for a ride" yesterday. A searching party headed by Sheriff Jerry Benson found the body.

Cross reported his and Benson's investigation showed McCourt quarreled with the girl Saturday night. He left the home of his brother-in-law, Clarence Riffle, with whom he lived, early Sunday morning. He took Riffle's shotgun.

McCourt appeared at the home of Roy Kellogg, another youth over whom he had quarreled with his fiancee. He asked Kellogg to "go for a ride" but Kellogg refused, Cross said.

McCourt located Jana and a companion as they were preparing to deliver newspapers. Jana went with McCourt, saying he would be back in about five minutes, Cross reported. He did not return.

An hour later, McCourt returned home. Cross said Riffle related that McCourt returned the shotgun, dropped an empty shell on the floor and said "there it is."

Cross quoted Riffle as saying McCourt remarked "he guessed he'd be leaving because the sheriff would be after him pretty soon." He packed his clothes and left.

Cross said McCourt went to his fiancee's home, bade her goodbye and said he guessed he wouldn't be seeing her any more. She was reported to have collapsed.

Circle or Block May be Used on National Ballot

An error occurred in the political advertisement in Sunday's News-Journal, sponsored by the Independent Association for Willkie, which showed ways in which to mark a ballot for Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential candidate.

At the right of the advertisement, McNary's name appeared under that of President Roosevelt in the Democratic column, and the name of Henry Wallace, Democratic vice presidential candidate appeared under Willkie's name in the Republican ballot. This, of course, was a transposition.

The intention of the advertisement, was to show the two ways in which a vote may be cast for the Republican presidential candidate. One is by placing the "x" in the circle. The other is by placing it in the block beside the names of the candidates.

The presidential ballot is separate and a vote for either presidential candidate is also a vote for the vice presidential candidate on the same ticket.

Man Killed By Train; Four Hurt In Traffic

When most high schools have homecoming games the captain of the football team is usually in the limelight before the game as much as the queen and her attendants. But he won't be at Madison high Friday when the Rams meet Loudonville. Coach Al Fendrick said today that his players will not participate in pre-game ceremonies for he wants all the footballers to concentrate on winning their first game in nine starts this season.

Mansfield pilots nearly wore a groove in the air lane between Mansfield and Akron yesterday. With almost perfect flying weather, Dr. L. D. Bonar and Ralph Shelton hopped over and back about noon. LeRoy Wittemire made the same trip shortly after noon, and Bonar, Shelton, and Norm Kann made the identical flight late in the afternoon to escort Tom Jones and two visiting pilots to the port. They were met about half way by "Bud" Harrington, airport manager, who flew over to get some photos of the formation in the air.

Officers Say Husband Admits He Killed Her In Quarrel Over Finances.

(By United Press)

ALLEGAN, Mich.—The battered body of Mrs. Dale Darrow, 17-year-old bride of three months, was found today in a shallow grave on an Allegan county farm some 12 hours after her husband reportedly confessed her slaying.

Oakland county officers found the girl's body after a formal charge of murder had been placed against her 23-year-old machinist husband, who in a confession, officers said, had told of an argument over financial arrangements for the birth of an expected baby.

The officers came here with Darrow after he had confessed in Pontiac. The body was located with little search, and officers prepared to return with it at once to Pontiac.

Darrow walked into Pontiac police headquarters early Sunday morning and reported that three bandits had assaulted him in a Pontiac parking lot, and that when he recovered consciousness the men and his wife were missing.

Darrow told detectives that he had been estranged from his wife, but had called for her at her parents' home Saturday to take her for a ride, hoping that they could effect a reconciliation.

The quarrel culminated, according to Darrow's confession, when he beat his wife on the head with his fists and then choked her to death.

HUNDREDS LEFT HOMELESS AS TYPHOON BLASTS ISLE OF GUAM

(By International News Service)

GUAM, Mid-Pacific—Hundreds of persons were made homeless and U. S. Navy and Pan American Airways properties were heavily damaged by a typhoon that pounded the island of Guam, reaching a velocity of 150 miles an hour early today.

One of the first messages dispatched after radio facilities were restored was an appeal for aid. In a radiogram to Red Cross headquarters at Washington, Capt. G. J. McMillan, U. S. N., governor of the island, stated:

"As local chairman I appeal to the American Red Cross for $50,000 to relieve distress among the civil population as the result of the severe typhoon."

The storm, screeching across the island for almost eight hours, wrecked Pan American's hotel, blew roofs off hangars, leveled radio towers and swept away and demolished hundreds of native huts.

Only "minor casualties" were reported by the navy among its large personnel. No one was reported injured among the airline's 40 employes stationed on the island. There were no Pan-American clippers in the area.

Today's typhoon was the second to strike mid-Pacific air bases in the last two weeks. The previous storm wrecked Pan-American facilities at Wake Island.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Speaking For Myself.

I think Broadway should toss its hat in the air and cheer for a dark, thin little girl named Nadine Gae, who danced across the stage of "Panama Hattie" night before last and became, next to the always Number One Ethel Merman, the hit of the show.

I think the cheers should be ringing in her ears first because she is one of the brightest dancers to be lit by footlights in many years, second because she can take it.

A year ago this time, Nadine was a sad girl. She had been signed for the Rodgers and Hart-George Abbott musical "Too Many Girls," but when the show opened in New Haven the producer and the songwriters decided she wasn't good enough.

She wasn't fast enough to dance with Hal LeRoy, or she wasn't the type to be teamed with him—and the experts didn't think much of her solo, either. So when the show hit Boston, she was let out and her role given to a girl named Mildred Law.

Of course it is always humiliating not to come into New York with a show once the publicity has been given out that you're cast in it, because when that happens Broadway knows there's only one explanation: you just weren't good enough.

I don't know what Nadine did after she took the train out of Boston that week—but however she felt she took it on the chin. Perhaps she decided to work harder than ever and become such a wonderful dancer that some day she'd take Broadway by storm.

I think that is what she must have decided. Because that is what she did.

I wonder how the belles of 15 years ago will react to Tyrone Power in the famous old Valentino role in "Blood and Sand." Valentino has such rabid fans, even now, so many years after his death, that poor Tyrone will probably be deluged with indignant fan letters demanding to know how he dares try to play a role immortalized by Valentino. The truth is he'll probably play it better. . . .

Wonder why it is people can't resist looking at those floor indicators over elevator entrances, even thought it never helps to know that the car is on the seventeenth floor if you're on the fifth.

Nothing seems more ridiculous to me than cafe society citizens who go around with the lapels plastered with political buttons, or who wear "Vote for so and so" signs as earrings or decorations for the coiffure. I guess I will never get excited enough about politics to let the celluloid buttons get in my hair. . . .

I hear Joan Crawford was served with a summons by Lee Morrisen, who is suing her for breach of contract, claiming he arranged a Broadway play for her and she didn't go through with it. That's an odd kind of suit . . .

Mario, the Hurricane host, who has been in the night club business a long time, tells me that more people get what the Harvard boys call "squiffy" on rum than on any other kind of drink—rye, Scotch, gin or wine. He says straight rum drinkers are the most dangerous.

On Broadway you are always running into odd and fascinating characters, but my favorite of the week is a gentleman called Nathan Zatkin, whom I was delighted to meet the other evening at LaMartinique.

Mr. Zatkin, a dark little fellow with an amusingly wry face, informed me that he was engaged, night and day, in a terrific fight—a fight against skinless frankfurters.

This was a fight I had not even realized was going on, but Mr. Zatkin tells me that compared to it, the European conflict is nothing. Recently Phil Baker, on his radio program, mentioned skinless frankfurters, and Mr. Zatkin rushed to him and created such an uproar and a fury of scolding that Mr. Baker apologized and almost wept. Mr. Zatkin figures it will be a long time before Mr. Baker commits another faux pas like that.

The biggest crisis in Mr. Zatkin's life occurred when the Roosevelts invited the King and Queen of England to picnic at Hyde Park and word got out that frankfurters were to be on the menu. Well, you can be sure that Mr. Zatkin saw to it that the frankfurters eaten by Their Majesties had skins on. He went right to the White House to do it.

I wonder how far this fad of showing movies in night clubs will go. Spivy's now shows old-time flickers at dinner-time. . . . The other day in Central park I happened to pass by a man who was walking a large and beautiful dog on a chain.

"What a lovely dog," I said, on the verge of petting the pretty canine. "Does he bite?"

"He bites, all right," he said. "And he's not a dog—he's a Canadian timber wolf!"

From now on I won't even say hello to an animal unless I'm sure it's a pomeranian.

As far as I'm concerned, the inventors can stop working on television for telephones. What girl wants to answer the phone with cold cream on her face or her hair up in curlers?

I'm about ready for another edge-of-the-seat movie like "Foreign Correspondent." . . . I think the place to be on election night is home with a good book. . . . I'd love to hear a Variety headline writer making love to his girl. . . .

I think it must be awful to be one of those "typical" families that are always being selected for some reason or other. I don't think it would be fun to be too "typical" of anything. Of course, it would be nice to be typical of Hedy Lamarr.

Ends His Life at Same Spot Where He Failed in 1932

CINCINNATI —(U.P.)— Irwin J. Bellman found death Sunday at the same place where it evaded him eight years ago.

The 41-year-old bank clerk was fatally injured in a 100-foot jump from the upper deck of the Western Hills viaduct yesterday. He jumped from the same viaduct on Oct. 15, 1932, but trolley wires broke his fall and his only injury was a rightarm fracture.

In his overcoat pocket, police this time found a note addressed to his wife, Adril, which read, in part:

"Our marriage was a mistake. I cannot give you children. Men are being called to the army. You cannot be proud of me. I cannot go."

Automotive Supplies Wallop Columbus Combine, 26-8

Lockhart Paves Way for First Mansfield Score

Former Madison High Star Impressive; Al Schwaner Makes Brilliant Run.

By CHARLES MARTIN, News-Journal Sports Editor.

MIXING a devastating running attack with an accurate aerial offensive, the Automotive Supply semi-pro football team registered an impressive 26 to 8 triumph over a stubborn and hostile Columbus Avondale Athletic club grid machine before a fair-sized crowd at the Fairground yesterday.

Playing their first home engagement of the season, the Supplies struck pay dirt in the first three periods in marking up their biggest score of the season.

Coach Earl McMullen's fast-improving combine spotted the Capital City outfit to a 6 to 0 lead in the opening minute of the game and then roared back in spectacular fashion.

The Mansfield outfit scored once in the first frame, added two touchdowns in the second and climaxed the scoring with a tally in the third.

Floyd Southard, Columbus fullback, gave the Avondale team its lone touchdown when he took the opening kickoff and raced 89 yards through the entire Mansfield team.

Southard, without question the best back Columbus had on the field, took the pigskin on his 11-yard line. He spun and twisted through the Mansfielders and raced over standing.

The Columbus team added its other two points when a swarm of gridders tackled Kenny Lockhart former Madison high star behind the goal line in the final chapter.

Lockhart, one of the main cogs in the Supply backfield and Al Schwaner were the offensive standouts for the Mansfield team.

The former entered the game in the first period and sparked the team to its initial score. In two plays he carried the ball from the Columbus 33 to the one-foot line and Harper Au slashed off-tackle for the tally on the next play. Al Schwaner kicked the point and Mansfield was out in front to stay.

Al Schwaner, lanky halfback, gave the fans a thrill in the second period. With the ball on the Mansfield 10 he streaked down the right sidelines and reached to the Columbus 15 before he was knocked out of bounds. His teammates gave him some fine blocking on the play.

Two plays later he hit the center of the line for eight yards and the second marker. His placement for the extra point was wide.

The third tally was scored shortly afterwards after a 23-yard, Vern Heiser-to-Al Schwaner pass, and a 10-yard run by Vern placed the ball on the Avondale 12. Heiser went over center from the two. Schwaner's kick was low.

Mansfield marched 59 yards for the final touchdown early in the third stanza. Three first downs put the pigskin on the invaders' 12 and Schwaner skirted his own left end into the end zone. He added the point with a perfect placement.

Yesterday's contest was the longest ever played by the Supplies.

The opening half, which found several of the players coming off the ground with fists swinging, lasted an hour-and-a-half.

Southard, who was ejected from the game in the opening half for talking back to the referee, was allowed to re-enter the tilt at the start of the second half.

The Columbus manager told the officials and Coach McMullen that the team would not finish the affray unless Southard was allowed to play.

Mansfield was in command of the tussle all the way. The supplies registered 17 first downs—five on passes—while Columbus was collecting five.

Ed Zwirko, Jim Heiser, Elmer Davis, Clayton Le Sage and Lehman played brilliant ball for the Mansfielders. Numerous times they broke through to throw the Columbus backs for losses.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY M'LEMORE.

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—With the election of a president of the United States coming up tomorrow, I have logically chosen to discuss the importance of the kick after touchdown in college football with you today.

If the number of campaign speeches I have been listening to lately happens to color my writing, please do not swap sports-writers in mid-stream because I promise to straighten myself out later on.

The Minnesota - Northwestern game here Saturday showed what can come of an unlucky alliance between a coach who does not stress placement kicking and defeat. The two go hand in hand. It was by the narrow margin of a missed kick that Northwestern was beaten 12 to 13.

I hate war—I despise war. I don't want Northwestern's football dictator, Lynn Waldorf to rise up in arms against me. But I must ask, as an American if Northwestern's way of winning is not jeopardized by the fact that in his team of office his expenditures have not provided adequate protection against missed tries for the extra point?

Thomas Jefferson saw the danger in missed placement kicks. Nowhere in his writings will you find him advocating a way of living that endorses one-point defeats.

No football team can be free unless it knows that the business men (of its alumni) are back of it, seeing to it that the wheels of industry are turning to produce a sound, sure extra point kicker.

I have no machine supporting me (with the exception of my typewriter) in this campaign for better kicking, but I say to you that if football teams have better kickers they can say the drums of victory are rolling, the thunderous drums of an aroused student body are beating on the campus tonight. Victory! victory is on the march!

When I started this column I had not the slightest bitterness in my soul for anyone. When it closes I will not have any bitterness.

Whether you work in the farm, the factory, the office, or in business you are all American citizens who hate to lose in these football pools as badly as I do so rise up and demand that your team, the team that your father and your grandfather helped buy football players for, shall not throw you down because of one measly point. ## Michigan-Minnesota, Stanford-Washington Clashes Top Show

Topped by the all-important Western Conference clash between Michigan and Minnesota at Minneapolis and the Pacific Coast duel between Stanford and Washington at Palo Alto., Cal., the week's football card is the most attractive yet this season. The Wolverine-Gopher meeting should decide the loop race. The Stanford-Washington battle may mean the Rose Bowl for the winner. Other standout games for Nov. 9 bring together Notre Dame and Navy at Baltimore, Southern Methodist and Texas A. & M. at Dallas, Nebraska and Iowa at Lincoln and Louisiana and Mississippi State at Baton Rouge, La. Intersectional games for the week-end include Fordham-Purdue, Holy Cross-Mississippi, Columbia-Wisconsin and Manhattan-Marquette.

Football Sked Brings Leading College Games

Wolverines Clash With Gophers, While Texas Aggies Tackle Mustangs.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Minnesota plays Michigan Saturday, the Texas Aggies encounter Southern Methodist and Stanford meets Washington. When these games are over the football "experts" may have some real idea of who is who in the football world this season.

Minnesota and Michigan are the unbeaten and untied survivors of the Titanic struggle for western conference championship. The Texas Aggies and Stanford have equally perfect records. S. M. U., unbeaten, has been tied once in the southwest conference while Washington, defeated by Minnesota, is right behind Stanford in the Pacific Coast conference race.

Ranking with these on the list of unbeaten and untied candidates for the mythical national title are Cornell, Georgetown, Boston college, Notre Dame and Tennessee.

Prospects for continued success of the leaders are about like this:

Cornell has played by far the toughest schedule without letting down. Columbia, considered a possible upsetter, was just a 27-0 victim for the big red last Saturday and Yale, which lost 6-2 to Brown, will be lucky to do as well this week.

Georgetown beat Syracuse 28-6 for its 22nd consecutive game without a defeat. Boston College's 25-0 victory over Manhattan helped the Eagles' status but they go back to minor league company this week against Boston university, 10-0 victim of Western Reserve.

Pennsylvania, which rallied from its defeat by Michigan to trounce previously unbeaten Navy 20-0, plays Harvard, which fought Princeton's favored team to a scoreless tie. Fordham, also beaten the previous week downed North Carolina 14-0 and now tackles Purdue, 21-6 winner over Iowa for its first Big Ten triumph.

Other games of major importance this week include Columbia against Wisconsin, Pittsburgh against Carnegie Tech, Princeton against Dartmouth, and Army against Brown.

Being held 7-0 by Army was a let-down for Notre Dame and they'll probably be out to make up for it when they meet Navy at Baltimore.

The Western conference race was reduced to a two-team affair when Minnesota edged Northwestern 13-12. If they get past Michigan, the Gophers should have a clear road to the title. This week Northwestern faces Illinois, 13-6 victim of Wisconsin Indiana, beaten 21-6 by Ohio State, meets Michigan State, 32-0 winner over Kansas State while Iowa plays Nebraska's Cornhuskers, who went to the top of the Big Six standing with a 13-0 win over Oklahoma.

Oklahoma, now tied with Missouri for second in their circuit, plays Kansas, which was beaten 33-7 by Villanova Friday.

Another interesting game will be Detroit, dropped from the unbeaten class, 7-0, by Tulsa, against Texas Christian, 14-12 winner over Baylor.

Tennessee, the south's only "major" unbeaten and untied team, showed strength in bowling over Louisiana State 28-0. Mississippi kept pace in the southeastern conference standings by beating Vanderbilt 13-7.

With these two leaders on the sidelines next Saturday it's Alabama, an impressive 25-0 winner over Kentucky, against Tulane, which knocked Clemson out of the unbeaten group by 13-0.

In the Southern conference Duke, which surprised with a 41-7 score against Georgia Tech, faces Davidson.

Preparing for this week's decisive encounter, Texas A. and M. rolled over Arkansas 17-0 while Southern Methodist outscored Texas 21-13.

Utah knocked off Colorado 21-13 to go into a tie for the Rocky Mountain conference lead.

Stanford beat U. C. L. A. 20-14. Washington may prove a tougher customer this week and at least looks like the only team which might be able to stop the Indians' Rose-Bowl march.

Steele Faces Martin In Preliminary Bout.

Bob Steele, Mansfield wrestling promotor, will be out to chalk up a victory at 8:30 p. m. today when he tangles with Speedy Martin in the 30-minute preliminary bout on the weekly show at the Doehla - Soprana Athletic club. Steele and Martin fought to a draw a couple of weeks ago and Steele suffered a broken nose. In the feature tonight, Buck Weaver faces Maurice LaChappell, while Gil LaCross takes on Sweeney in the semi-final affair.

TEAM FACES TROUBLE

YOUNGSTOWN, O. — (INS) — Youngstown East high looked back on a 32-6 win over Woodrow Wilson and hoped to fare as well against the mighty Massillon Tigers in their football game next Saturday. East's win over Wilson cinched the city title.

MAY SHORTEN SCHEDULE

COLUMBUS — (AP) — President George M. Trautman of the American Association said league directors would consider at their Louisville Ky., meeting Nov. 30-Dec. 1 whether to shorten their 1941 baseball season a week, opening it April 7 and closing Sept. 7.

Marty Slovak Stars for Cleveland

Former Toledo Ace Flips Accurate Passes and Scores Touchdown.

By TOM SILER

CHICAGO — (AP) — The Green Bay Packers' famed passing attack is showing signs of falling apart, but the Washington Redskins are ready to take up where the national champions left off.

The Packers, five times the champion in the past 11 years, blew plenty of scoring opportunities yesterday in bowing to the Chicago Bears, 14 to 7, while the undefeated Redskins were racking up their seventh straight triumph, 37 to 10, at the expense of Pittsburgh.

The New York Giants eked out a 10 to 7 victory over Brooklyn before 33,000, Ward Cuff's 25-yard field goal being the ultimate margin in a bitter struggle. Cleveland finally found its air attack and crushed Detroit under a 24 to 0 score, completing 10 of 13 passes for 131 yards.

Marty Slovak, former Toledo university ace, starting at Parker Hall's tailback post against Detroit, played one of the greatest games of his career before 18,881 spectators in Cleveland.

In the first half he flipped 29-yard and 32-yard passes to set up Cleveland's opening touchdown. In between tosses the 176-pounder smashed the Detroit line for impressive gains. Then, in the last period, he finished off the day by plunging three yards for a touchdown.

Another Buckeye, Chet Adams of Ohio university, carried his share of glory out of the triumph, forming the spearhead of the Cleveland attack. In the final period he booted a 23-yard field goal from a sideline angle.

The Columbus Bulls still rode atop the America professional football league heap today.

Using an aerial attack, the Bulls thumped the Cincinnati Bengals 21 to 2 in Columbus yesterday.

Bissman Keglers Hit 3069 Total In Match

CHALKING up large team scores in the North Central Ohio Traveling bowling league apparently is an easy task for the Bissman Company club.

The Bissman outfit met the Red Flares of Fostoria at the Meder Recreation alleys yesterday and pounded out a brilliant 3069 total to win two games and hold its first place lead in the league race.

Led by John Leppo, Art Hilborn and Farrell Hipp the Bissman keglers put together games of 1029, 1071 and 969 for the big total.

Leppo set the individual pace with a spectacular 661, which included games of 256, 215 and 193. His 256 total in the opening game was also high, although Hilborn, who had a 622, hit a 255 in the middle game. Hipp had games of 213, 183 and 244 for a 620.

Newhouser led the losers with a 630, while Clarence "Sonny" Meder and Dale Cleckner of the Bissman club had scores of 592 and 571, respectively.

Buckeyes Have Week's Rest Before Meeting Illinois

COLUMBUS — (UP) — Coach Francis Schmidt of Ohio State began a two-week fence-mending program today.

The long-awaited "open date" is scheduled next Saturday, allowing the Bucks a fortnight to prepare for the two final games, one with Illinois, then Tom Harmon plus 10 other Michigan players.

Called a "top team of the nation" in August, Ohio State found itself a very much so-so eleven today with a .500 record—and that mark was reached last Saturday when the Bucks rose up after three straight defeats to beat Indiana, 21 to 6.

After the wind had aided Ohio to corner the Hoosiers in the first period and sped the Bucks to a two-touchdown lead, Schmidt began to give his lineup a liberal sprinkling of substitutes. Almost three teams saw action. Another touchdown came in the second period and Ohio, living up to its reputation of being a first half scorer, spent the remainder of the game holding hurlin' Hal Hursh, Indiana's star passer, in check.

Indiana continued its strange habit of looking best in statistics in spite of the fact that the team wound up the loser. The Hoosiers made 16 first downs to 10, rushed 142 yards to 101, passed 143 yards to 65. But Ohio won and marked up a second Big Ten conference triumph.

While the Bucks are resting Saturday, the game of the year will be played between undefeated Minnesota and undefeated Michigan and to the winner almost certainly will go the Big Ten championship.

This tussle of the perfect record teams scheduled at Minnesota, tops anything on the program from coast to coast. Even in the days when these teams battled for nothing more than the little brown jug they packed their games with bitter rivalry. This week, they're after the jug, the Big Ten title and national honors as well.

Two missed placements after touchdowns kept Minnesota in the thick of the "round robin" between Minnesota, Michigan and Northwestern. Except for the two nulled conversions, Minnesota and Northwestern had a standoff in Dyche stadium Saturday.

Minnesota's victory was its third on conference competition, its fifth against all-comers since the season opened just ten idle last week, remained in second place with one conference victory.

Teams Fail to Stop Barons

Three Leading Clubs Fall By Wayside In Race.

CLEVELAND (INS) — Three teams that figure to go places in the American Hockey League this season had failed today to stop the high flying Cleveland Barons, whose latest victims were the new Buffalo entry.

The Barons spoiled the opening of the new $2,770,000 Buffalo auditorium before 11,460 fans last night by turning in a 4-2 victory for their third straight win.

Ten Combines Suffer Defeat

Clubs Fall From Unbeaten College List.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Ten teams, including four of "major" ranking, were removed from the list of undefeated and untied football teams over the past week-end but three newcomers brought the total up to 31 survivors after the first Saturday of November.

The trio whose perfect records had been buried in obscurity were Milligan of Tennessee, Shurtleff of Illinois and La Crosse (Wis.) Teachers.

Major casualties over the past week-end were Northwestern, beaten 13-12 by Minnesota in a battle of undefeated giants; Clemson, conquered 13-0 by Tulane; Navy, 20-0 victim of Pennsylvania, and Detroit, upset 7-0 by Tulsa.

Two Ohio colleges, Heidelberg and Oberlin, lost their first games to undefeated and untied rivals, Bethany of West Virginia and Wittenberg.

Tom Harmon Still Maintains Lead

NEW YORK (AP) Though he enjoyed a day of rest Saturday along with his Michigan teammates, Tommy Harmon managed to cling to a slim lead in the national football scoring race.

The big Wolverine's total of 87 points in five games, including 12 touchdowns was one point better than the 86 boasted by Walter Peduna of Norwich University in Vermont, who jumped into the race by piling up 27 points as his team smothered the Hyannis Teachers of Massachusetts, 40 to 0. The splurge also enables him to supplant Penn's Frank Reagan as the eastern leader though the Quaker star scored a touchdown and ran his total to 87.

Kent State Back Sets College Scoring Pace

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Mickey Mittiga, Kent State's flashy 145-pound quarterback, tops Ohio's college football scorers with 50 points, but the proudest point-producer in the realm is Bob Williams, Marietta's junior quarterback.

The Pioneers from the River city had lost four games and tied one up to Saturday, when Williams took things into his own hands against Otterbein, which had won three of its six tilts.

In the second period Williams scampered 17 yards for a touchdown. A few mintues later he galloped 80 yards for another and in the last period ran 45 yards for a third. That gave him 18 points as the Pioneers hopped into the victory column for the first time, 19 to 0.

Mittiga scored but one point Saturday as Kent beat Bowling Green, 13 to 0, for its seventh straight win the best record in the state. His total of 50 put him seven-up on Tony Aiello of Youngstown, and eight ahead of Fenton Wolfe of Heidelberg and Bob Nash of Toledo.

Jim Langhurst, Ohio State captain who counted two touchdowns as the Bucks broke their losing streak by beating Indiana 21 to 6, took over the fifth spot with 36 points.

Ohio State gets a day off next Saturday, but other Ohio college squads have 21 games slated. Holding the spotlight is the clash between Muskingum 1939 Ohio conference king, and Heidelberg, present leader with five consecutive wins.

Leading scorers in the Ohio race.

50—Mickey Mittiga, Kent State; 43—Tony Aiello, Youngstown; 42—Fenton Wolfe of Heidelberg and Bob Nash of Toledo; 36—Jim Langhurst of Ohio State; 34—Miesle of De Sales and Vardaro of Youngstown; 30—Jones of Kent State, Kostyo of Wittenberg, and Booth of Western Reserve.

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

BIDS RAISED FOR LEADING STOCKS TODAY

Most Traders Fail To 'Reach' For Favorite Issues; Bonds Indefinite.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Bids were raised slightly for leading stocks in today's market but traders generally refused to "reach" for favorites.

Up at one time or another were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Curtiss-Wright, U. S. Rubber, American Telephone, Pennsylvania Standard Oil of New Jersey and Oliver Farm. Some of these eventually slipped.

Bonds and commodities failed to develop definite trends.

Tomorrow's national election held the spotlight in boardrooms.

Financial quarters scanned the survey of the magazine "steel" which said that while consumers of the metal were cooperating more closely with producers, there have been no signs of slackening of demand, specifications or shipments in the industry for many weeks to come.

Those watching the motors studied reports from Detroit that unfilled orders for several manufacturers still are rising and, in some instances are at record peaks for the season.

MARKETS, BANKS CLOSE

The nation's security markets will be closed tomorrow, election day. Banks will close at noon.

Willkie Proposes Constitutional Ban Against More Than 2 Terms as President.

"except for the advancement of your cause and the preservation of American democracy.

This assertion was made, he said, "despite last minute rumors which counsels of desperation spread about me to mislead voters."

"I have neither offered to nor discussed with any person any appointment to any cabinet position or any other position," he added. "And I have never authorized anyone else to do so."

Willkie asked Americans to vote "to show the world the force and power of the free ballot in a democracy dedicated to peace and progress."

"Voting is the only way our citizens have t ocontrol their government," he said. "Failure to vote is not only an abdication of the high privilege of American citizenship, but is an acquiescence in whatever loss of liberty may come, if the power of the bosses be not outvoted. * * *

"Voters must remember that their vote is secret and may not be learned by any man. They can vote as they please, regardless of the party in which they may be registered."

Willkie is scheduled for three radio broadcasts today. The first, at 3:15 p. m. (EST) over CBS, is sponsored by the Associated Willkie Clubs of America on the Kathleen Norris program.

Over the same network, the nominee will join his running mate, Sen. Charles L. McNary of Oregon, and Rep. Joseph W. Martin, jr., Republican national chairman, in a program from 10:15 to 11 p. m. (EST).

He will close his campaign in a program by the Associated Willkie Clubs over all four major radio networks from midnight to 1 a. m.

lery, rifles, ammunitions and warplanes.

Concrete British aid to the little Aegean kingdom took a two-fold spurt. Official circles in London confirmed that British troops now have landed on the Greek Isle of Crete, opposite the Italian Dodecanese islands. The British poured $80,000,000 into Greece's defense coffers.

British naval assistance in striking at the Italian invasion was also indicated in sketchy reports of a sea battle Sunday evening west of the island of Corfu, at the lower end of the Greek-Albanian frontier.

The Athens radio said that 30 minutes after firing at sea was heard "a large vessel was seen ablaze, steaming northward," toward Italian defense bases — indicating the ship was Italian.

At the same time, British RAF bombers, now presumably operating from Greek bases, caused an hour and 45-minute alarm in Rome —the Italian capital's first alert since July 24—and also attacked Naples again.

Mussolini's high command said that the RAF raiders failed to reach Rome, although the capital's populace was awakened by the wail of airraid sirens at 3:45 a. m., and that the planes which attempted to bomb Naples were met "by a barrage of anti-aircraft fire," forcing them to drop their bombs in the open countryside.

In Athens, authoritative quarters summed up the week-old conflict as "developing satisfactorily," and the semi-official Greek news agency asserted Italian claims of having "penetrated the Greek defense line were "a tissue of scurrilous lies."

"The Italians talk of conquest of vast territories containing hundreds of thousands of inhabitants. In reality they are still being held in the frontier where indeed certain points are already known to have been freed by the bayonets of the Greek army."

(Last week, the Italians claimed to have advanced 35 miles in the Ioannina sector, capturing 79 villages.)

Reports from Belgrade said Greek veterans, in a daring venture, crossed Lake Presba in small boats at night and fell upon an Italian garrison in Albanian territory.

The Italian high command again gave only the briefest mention of the Balkan war, asserting that five "enemy" planes were shot down in an air fight over Salonika.

Germany was reported sending thousands of her crack mechanized and infantry troops into Rumania today—perhaps for a southward thrust against Greece and Turkey to aid Italy's slow-moving offensive from Albania.

Swiss reports linked the heavy concentration in Rumania with an expected meeting of Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano, Nazi Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, and Germany's ambassador to Turkey, Franz Von Papen. Count Ciano was reported yesterday to have flown to Germany from his active air command in Albania.

Italian airmen continued to pound at Salonika, the Greek port at the north end of the Aegean sea. Aided by Britain, Greece pitted her small air force against Italy to hammer at Fascist troop concentrations and supply depots along the Albanian frontier.

A Greek communique on yesterday's bombings said merely that there were "dead and injured among civilians."

For the first time in eight weeks, London went all night without an air raid alarm, but low-flying German raiders machine-gunned Sunday daytime strollers, cyclists and motorists in East Anglia.

Soviet Russia rejected a British protest that Russia's present participation in negotiations with Germany, Italy and Rumania for a new Danube commission to administer the river trafficway constituted a violation of neutrality.

Authorized Nazi quarters in Berlin, countering rumors of a new peace move by Adolf Hitler, said all such talk was "made in England" and intended to influence the United States presidential electors tomorrow.

These quarters said the Axis had no desire to offer England peace.

Germans Claim Big Toll of Shipping

BERLIN —(UP)— German submarines and airplanes sank about 80,000 tons of British shipping yesterday including two big auxiliary cruisers and a freighter sunk by a single submarine, Nazis asserted today.

The submarine, the official news agency reported, sank the 18,723-ton White Star liner Laurentic and the 11,314 ton China Mutual Steam Navigation liner, Patroclus, both former crack passenger ships now serving as armed auxiliaries.

Nazi informants said that the same submarine sank the 5,376 ton elder and freighter Casanare.

They asserted that yesterday a German bombing plane scored two hits on the 12,141 ton Union-Castle liner Windsor Castle several hundred miles west of Ireland and rendered it unmaneuverable.

DIES PREDICTS AGENT CLEAN-UP

Expects 3000 Indictments Next Month, Scares Italians.

ORANGE, Tex. —(AP)— Rep. Dies (D.-Tex.) chairman of the house committee investigating un-American activities, predicted today 3,000 indictments would be returned throughout the nation against subversive groups within the next month.

He said investigations of the committee would show "the Italian espionage and propaganda end of the story" is more important than "the German end."

Dies predicted the indictments would name foreign agents and fellow thinkers for the forging of names, forging of passports, purjury, illegal entry of the country and counterfeiting.

peals court judge, county probate judge, and eight special issues.

Polls will open at 6:30 a. m. Tuesday in the county's 92 voting places and will remain open until 6:30 p. m. State liquor stores and places where liquor is sold by the glass will be closed during the day. Taverns and public places handling liquor will reopen at 7:30 p. m. Banks will close at noon.

Mansfield voters will receive four separate ballots when they enter the voting booth tomorrow. One will be a small ballot bearing the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates. That ballot permits no "split voting." It must either be for Wendell L. Willkie and Charles McNary or for Franklin D. Roosevelt and Henry A. Wallace.

There will be a large party column ballot with the names of state, district and county candidates, another with the candidates for supreme court, appeals court, and county probate court, while the fourth will concern the proposed one-mill levy to be voted on in Mansfield.

Other districts in the county which will vote on special issues will have four ballots and others will have only three.

Secretary of State George M. Neffner, instructed all county election boards to tabulate the presidential ballots first, so the outcome of that contest probably will be known first unless others are one-sided.

With a record vote in prospect, ballots for all the offices probably will not be tabuated before Wednesday morning.

With two or three exceptions, close races for Richland county offices were predicted today by leaders of both parties.

BOTH PARTIES SEE VICTORY AS CAMPAIGN ENDS

Nip-and-Tuck National Election Drive Ends With Talks By Both Nominees Tonight.

of 427 electoral votes for Mr. Roosevelt, but then upped his estimate last night to an undisclosed higher figure.

Republican National Chairman Martin, meanwhile, was claiming a Willkie victory of 324 electoral votes—a comfortable margin over the 266 necessary for election.

The weather bureau, forecasting in another field, saw generally fair weather for most of the country tomorrow, with the possibility of some light rain in some eastern and central sections. Rain on election day has long been credited with cutting down the vote in rural areas, but the advent of good country roads has made that belief less reliable than in the past.

Generally fair weather was expected to produce a record-breaking outpouring of some 50,000,000 voters. Computations place the number of eligible voters in the country at more than 60,000,000. The previous vote record was in 1936, then 45,000,000 out of 55,000,000 eligibles cast ballots, giving President Roosevelt a plurality of almost 11,000,000.

To get out the maximum vote, both parties were mobilizing their armies of workers—regulars and amateurs—for the zero hour tomorrow.

While the fighting finish of the presidential campaign all but preempted popular attention, the ballots tomorrow will show a long list of national, state and local offices to be decided.

There are 35 seats in the U. S. senate to be filled, with 102 candidates in the scramble to capture them. There are 432 house seats at stake, and 979 aspirants vying for them. There are 33 governorships for which a field of 102 are contending. And there are a host of other state and local offices at issue.

The big interest in the congressional race is which party will emerge with control of the house of representatives. It is generally conceded that to upset the Democratic majority in the senate would require a major political miracle, since the Republicans would have to capture at least 3 out of 5 seats in the "solid south."

With regard to the house, however, no one concedes anything. Republican Chairman Martin predicted that his party would make a net gain of from 60 to 75 seats and take control. The Republicans would need to pick up only 48 seats to get a bare majority of 218. The total house membership is 435.

The Democratic counterclaim was "very little change" in the present line-up. Rep. Drewry of Virginia, chairman of the house Democratic campaign committee, said his party would retan an "absolute safe majority" and might even gain 15 seats.

The last pre-election Sabbath brought no great slackening in the campaign tempo.

Willkie in a formal statement announced that "when elected" his first communication to congress would recommend a constitutional amendment fixing a maximum of eight years for the tenure of any president.

The Republican nominee also repeated his "broken pledges" charge against his Democratic opponent and asserted that Mr. Roosevelt's Cleveland speech "echoed my very strenuous pleas for (national) unity, but the echo came back thin and garbled by the interference of nearly eight years of discrepancy between his promise and performance."

John L. Lewis, the CIO chieftain, predicted a Willkie victory in a statement which said that the vote of labor would determine "whether it is capable of following its own developed and elected leadership, or whether it will accept the temporary leadership of an erratic, warmongering politician."

The president of the AFL, William Green, however, confined his pre-election statement to urging the AFL membership to vote "for those candidates whose election you honestly and sincerely believe will best serve the interests of the masses of the people and the nation as well."

The national committee of Democrats for Willkie meanwhile was announcing that "final reports from 37 states indicate a trend of from 21 to 26 per cent of registered Democrats to Willkie"

Mayor F. H. La Guardia, however, forecast a "smashing victory" for Mr. Roosevelt and charged that numerous corporations backing Willkie had "interests" in Germany and "hoped to change the United States of America to United States, Inc."

Republican Chairman Martin, replying to President Roosevelt's charge that as a member of the house he had opposed administration farm legislation, termed the New Deal farm program a "tragic failure" and said he would support agricultural bills when they "will give some real relief."

James A. Farley, who helped Mr. Roosevelt to his 1932 and 1936 victories, urged upstate New York party leaders to "put forth every effort" on election day "in support of President Roosevelt and the entire Democratic ticket." Farley said he had never "been more deeply concerned than at the present time for the success of the Democratic party in the state of New York."

OHIO EXPECTED TO CAST RECORD VOTE TOMORROW

3,250,000 Due to Go to Polls In State; Bricker-Davey Race Tops Interest.

tentially a vital sector on the ballot front.

Republicans, banking on the rural vote, worried about possible adverse weather that might dampen their partisans' enthusiasm on election day.

The fight for offices in the state house, for Ohio congressional seats, the county courthouses, the judgeships and the state legislature, were pushed aside in popular attention to a great degree by the interest in the presidency, but have been no less intense and bitter.

Gov. John W. Bricker led the Republican state ticket, which is separate from the national ballot, seeking re-election against Martin L. Davey, twice governor of the state. If Bricker wins he will be the first Republican governor re-elected in nearly 40 years. If Davey is successful in his comeback he will be the third man in Ohio ever to have been governor three times.

Mayor Harold H. Burton, of Cleveland, carried the G. O. P. fight for U. S. senator against former Congressman John McSweeney, of Wooster, in the leading contest for representation in congress. Each party now has one senator. The Republicans have not had both places since 1930. Democrats cannot hope to do more than hold a 50-50 balance.

For the house, 24 seats were at stake. Sixteen of them are now held by the Republicans and eight by Democrats. Both places as congressman-at-large are now held by Republicans. The incumbents, George H. Bender, Cleveland, and L. L. Marshall, Euclid, were matched against former Congressman Stephen M. Young, Cleveland, and Francis W. Durbin, Lima, the Democratic aspirants.

For the first time in many years there are no minor parties on the ballot. Nor will the voter be asked to decide any statewide issue, such as a referendum or constitutional amendment. In every precinct, however, there will be at least three ballots—the short one with only the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates, the long state and county tickets, and the non-partisan judicial ballot.

Every state administrative or executive office is in contest. Republicans now hold every one except state auditor, occupied by Joseph T. Ferguson, Barberton, who is running for the auditor's four-year term against his predecessor, Joseph T. Tracy, Columbus. All other offices carry two-year terms.

Listed also on the state-county ballot will be the names of the candidates for district congressman in the voter's respective district and the nominees for the Ohio house and senate. Republicans four years ago elected 100 of the 136 house members and 27 of the 35 senators. This year 138 house seats will be voted on and 36 senate places.

Two full six-year terms on the Ohio supreme court and one unexpired term, running until Dec. 31, 1942, will be decided. For the term beginning Jan. 1, 1941 Clinton D. Boyd, Middletown, a Republican, is opposing Supreme Court Judge Charles B. Zimmerman, Springfield, a Democrat. For the full term beginning Jan. 2, the Republican nominee is former Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, Cincinnati. The Democrat is Judge McBride, Columbus. Supreme Court Judge Arthur H. Day, unsuccessful Republican candidate for the senatorial nomination in 1938, is running for this term also, having won nomination by petition. Party designations will not appear on the judicial ballot.

For the unexpired term of the late Judge George S. Myers, former Common Pleas Judge Edward C. Turner is the Republican candidate, opposing State Utilities Commissioner Dennis F. Dunlavy, of Ashtabula.

Besides the usual contests for local offices, voters also must settle local option campaigns in several communities and pass upon many proposed tax levies and bond issues, involving at least 300 which concern the schools.

CORRECTING AN ERROR IN SUNDAY'S NEWS-JOURNAL

In the "How to Vote for Willkie" advertisement published in Sunday's News-Journal by the Independent Association for Willkie, one of the Sample Ballots printed therein aligned the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates exactly wrong, that is Willkie and Wallace were paired and Roosevelt and McNary. This was due to a typographical error. The voting instructions were correct, however, because the President and Vice President run as a team, every vote for Willkie being as well a vote for McNary and every Roosevelt vote being a vote for Wallace, too. The advertisement below repeats and clarifies "How to Vote for Willkie" instructions.

This is in Direct Contrast to the familiar practice of "counter-marking" or "scratching." So to be sure and safe, follow one of the three samples shown below.

Rocks, Bottles Smash Windows at Johnny Appleseed

OFFICIALS FIND DESKS SCARRED, OTHER DAMAGE

Police Angered Over Acts of 'Malicious Vandalism' at New School.

There seemed to be no explanation today but outright vandalism for damage to the new Johnny Appleseed junior high school over the week-end.

School officials were incensed and police angered this morning when seven windows in the new building were found shattered. Detectives Lee J. Remy and Oscar Krupp were called to the school about 8 a. m. today when custodians found the windows broken.

They said several large rocks and bottles were found in the rooms on the ground level. The missiles had torn shades and damaged desks and blackboards.

Officers described the acts as "malicious," explaining that the rocks would have had to be hurled with severe force to cause the damage to the interior of the classrooms.

One of the stones, they said was about the size of a grapefruit. It scarred a desk and shattered the edge of the blackboard.

The school was opened early this year. It was one of two new junior high schools built at the cost of $400,000 apiece last year from funds derived from a $500,000 bond issue approved by the voters.

BOARD BEGINS BALLOT PROBE

'Official' Copies Are Found Circulated In Behalf of Clerk Candidate.

Balliet, chairman, said it was not likely that any further action will be taken.

"It was just a case of an overzealous campaigner trying a new stunt, probably without knowing how serious it was," Balliet said.

The ballots, exact copies of the originals, even down to the stamped signatures of election board members on the back, bore a rubber stamp copy of Wenning's signature opposite his name on the ticket.

"I did not see the ballots and I knew nothing of them until told about the stir that had been created before noon today," Wenning said.

"Naturally I wouldn't have permitted them to be used or my name to be stamped on them if I had known what they were," he added.

Wenning said Hipp borrowed the rubber stamp of his signature last night, explaining that he "wanted to use it on some sample ballots a printer left with me."

Election board officials, who were scheduled to meet this afternoon to determine what to do about the ballots, pointed out that a state law prohibits the use of copies of official ballots as samples, or even the use of white paper for copies.

The law also specifies that samples shall have the words "Sample ballot" stamped on them or it must be otherwise indicated that they are unofficial ballots.

GREEKS DRIVE ITALIANS BACK INTO ALBANIA

Ring Fascist Supply Base In North, Take 1,200 Captive; City's Fall Expected.

lery, rifles, ammunitions and warplanes.

Concrete British aid to the little Aegean kingdom took a two-fold spurt. Official circles in London confirmed that British troops now have landed on the Greek Isle of Crete, opposite the Italian Dodecanese islands. The British poured $80,000,000 into Greece's defense coffers.

British naval assistance in striking at the Italian invasion was also indicated in sketchy reports of a sea battle Sunday evening west of the island of Corfu, at the lower end of the Greek-Albanian frontier.

The Athens radio said that 30 minutes after firing at sea was heard "a large vessel was seen ablaze, steaming northward," toward Italian defense bases — indicating the ship was Italian.

At the same time, British RAF bombers, now presumably operating from Greek bases, caused an hour and 45-minute alarm in Rome —the Italian capital's first alert since July 24—and also attacked Naples again.

Mussolini's high command said that the RAF raiders failed to reach Rome, although the capital's populace was awakened by the wail of airraid sirens at 3:45 a. m., and that the planes which attempted to bomb Naples were met "by a barrage of anti-aircraft fire," forcing them to drop their bombs in the open countryside.

In Athens, authoritative quarters summed up the week-old conflict as "developing satisfactorily," and the semi-official Greek news agency asserted Italian claims of having "penetrated the Greek defense line were "a tissue of scurrilous lies."

"The Italians talk of conquest of vast territories containing hundreds of thousands of inhabitants. In reality they are still being held in the frontier where indeed certain points are already known to have been freed by the bayonets of the Greek army."

(Last week, the Italians claimed to have advanced 35 miles in the Ioannina sector, capturing 79 villages.)

Reports from Belgrade said Greek veterans, in a daring venture, crossed Lake Presba in small boats at night and fell upon an Italian garrison in Albanian territory.

The Italian high command again gave only the briefest mention of the Balkan war, asserting that five "enemy" planes were shot down in an air fight over Salonika.

Germany was reported sending thousands of her crack mechanized and infantry troops into Rumania today—perhaps for a southward thrust against Greece and Turkey to aid Italy's slow-moving offensive from Albania.

Swiss reports linked the heavy concentration in Rumania with an expected meeting of Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano, Nazi Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, and Germany's ambassador to Turkey, Franz Von Papen. Count Ciano was reported yesterday to have flown to Germany from his active air command in Albania.

Italian airmen continued to pound at Salonika, the Greek port at the north end of the Aegean sea. Aided by Britain, Greece pitted her small air force against Italy to hammer at Fascist troop concentrations and supply depots along the Albanian frontier.

A Greek communique on yesterday's bombings said merely that there were "dead and injured among civilians."

For the first time in eight weeks, London went all night without an air raid alarm, but low-flying German raiders machine-gunned Sunday daytime strollers, cyclists and motorists in East Anglia.

Soviet Russia rejected a British protest that Russia's present participation in negotiations with Germany, Italy and Rumania for a new Danube commission to administer the river trafficway constituted a violation of neutrality.

Authorized Nazi quarters in Berlin, countering rumors of a new peace move by Adolf Hitler, said all such talk was "made in England" and intended to influence the United States presidential elections tomorrow.

These quarters said the Axis had no desire to offer England peace.

Germans Claim Big Toll of Shipping

BERLIN—(U.P.)—German submarines and airplanes sank about 80,000 tons of British shipping yesterday, including two big auxiliary cruisers and a freighter sunk by a single submarine, Nazis asserted today.

The submarine, the official news agency reported, sank the 18,725-ton White Star liner Laurentic and the 11,314 ton China Mutual Steam Navigation liner, Patroclus, both former crack passenger ships now serving as armed auxiliaries.

Nazi informants said that the same submarine sank the 5,376 ton elder and freighter Casanare.

They asserted that yesterday a German bombing plane scored two hits on the 19,141 ton Union-Castle liner Windsor Castle several hundred miles west of Ireland and rendered it unmaneuverable.

DIES PREDICTS AGENT CLEAN-UP

Expects 3000 Indictments Next Month, Scares Italians.

ORANGE, Tex. —(AP)— Rep. Dies (D.-Tex.) chairman of the house committee investigating un-American activities, predicted today 3,000 indictments would be returned throughout the nation against subversive groups within the next month.

He said investigations of the committee would show "the Italian espionage and propaganda end of the story" is more important than "the German end."

Dies predicted the indictments would name foreign agents and fellow thinkers for the forging of names, forging of passports, purjury, illegal entry of the country and counterfeiting.

peals court judge, county probate judge, and eight special issues.

Polls will open at 6:30 a. m. Tuesday in the county's 92 voting places and will remain open until 6:30 p. m. State liquor stores and places where liquor is sold by the glass will be closed during the day. Taverns and public places handling liquor will reopen at 7:30 p. m. Banks will close at noon.

Mansfield voters will receive four separate ballots when they enter the voting booth tomorrow. One will be a small ballot bearing the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates. That ballot permits no "split voting." It must either be for Wendell L. Willkie and Charles McNary or for Franklin D. Roosevelt and Henry A. Wallace.

There will be a large party column ballot with the names of state, district and county candidates, another with the candidates for supreme court, appeals court, and county probate court, while the fourth will concern the proposed one-mill levy to be voted on in Mansfield.

Other districts in the county which will vote on special issues will have four ballots and others will have only three.

Secretary of State George M. Neffner, instructed all county election boards to tabulate the presidential ballots first, so the outcome of that contest probably will be known first unless others are one-sided.

With a record vote in prospect, ballots for all the offices probably will not be tabuated before Wednesday morning.

With two or three exceptions, close races for Richland county offices were predicted today by leaders of both parties.

BOTH PARTIES SEE VICTORY AS CAMPAIGN ENDS

Nip-and-Tuck National Election Drive Ends With Talks By Both Nominees Tonight.

of 427 electoral votes for Mr. Roosevelt, but then upped his estimate last night to an undisclosed higher figure.

Republican National Chairman Martin, meanwhile, was claiming a Willkie victory of 324 electoral votes—a comfortable margin over the 266 necessary for election.

The weather bureau, forecasting in another field, saw generally fair weather for most of the country tomorrow, with the possibility of some light rain in some eastern and central sections. Rain on election day has long been credited with cutting down the vote in rural areas, but the advent of good country roads has made that belief less reliable than in the past.

Generally fair weather was expected to produce a record-breaking outpouring of some 50,000,000 voters. Computations place the number of eligible voters in the country at more than 60,000,000. The previous vote record was in 1936, then 45,000,000 out of 55,000,000 eligibles cast ballots, giving President Roosevelt a plurality of almost 11,000,000.

To get out the maximum vote, both parties were mobilizing their armies of workers—regulars and amateurs—for the zero hour tomorrow.

While the fighting finish of the presidential campaign all but preempted popular attention, the ballots tomorrow will show a long list of national, state and local offices to be decided.

There are 35 seats in the U. S. senate to be filled, with 102 candidates in the scramble to capture them. There are 432 house seats at stake, and 979 aspirants vying for them. There are 33 governorships for which a field of 102 are contending. And there are a host of other state and local offices at issue.

The big interest in the congressional race is which party will emerge with control of the house of representatives. It is generally conceded that to upset the Democratic majority in the senate would require a major political miracle, since the Republicans would have to capture at least 3 out of 5 seats in the "solid south."

With regard to the house, however, no one concedes anything. Republican Chairman Martin predicted that his party would make a net gain of from 60 to 75 seats and take control. The Republicans would need to pick up only 48 seats to get a bare majority of 218. The total house membership is 435.

The Democratic counterclaim was "very little change" in the present line-up. Rep. Drewry of Virginia, chairman of the house Democratic campaign committee, said his party would retan an "absolute safe majority" and might even gain 15 seats.

The last pre-election Sabbath brought no great slackening in the campaign tempo.

Willkie in a formal statement announced that "when elected" his first communication to congress would recommend a constitutional amendment fixing a maximum of eight years for the tenure of any president.

The Republican nominee also repeated his "broken pledges" charge against his Democratic opponent and asserted that Mr. Roosevelt's Cleveland speech "echoed my very strenuous pleas for (national) unity, but the echo came back thin and garbled by the interference of nearly eight years of discrepancy between his promise and performance."

John L. Lewis, the CIO chieftain, predicted a Willkie victory in a statement which said that the vote of labor would determine "whether it is capable of following its own developed and elected leadership, or whether it will accept the temporary leadership of an erratic, warmongering politician."

The president of the AFL, William Green, however, confined his pre-election statement to urging the AFL membership to vote "for those candidates whose election you honestly and sincerely believe will best serve the interests of the masses of the people and the nation as well."

The national committee of Democrats for Willkie meanwhile was announcing that "final reports from 37 states indicate a trend of from 21 to 26 per cent of registered Democrats to Willkie"

Mayor F. H. La Guardia, however, forecast a "smashing victory" for Mr. Roosevelt and charged that numerous corporations backing Willkie had "interests" in Germany and "hoped to change the United States of America to United States, Inc."

Republican Chairman Martin, replying to President Roosevelt's charge that as a member of the house he had opposed administration farm legislation, termed the New Deal farm program a "tragic failure" and said he would support agricultural bills when they "will give some real relief."

James A. Farley, who helped Mr. Roosevelt to his 1932 and 1936 victories, urged upstate New York party leaders to "put forth every effort" on election day "in support of President Roosevelt and the entire Democratic ticket." Farley said he had never "been more deeply concerned than at the present time for the success of the Democratic party in the state of New York."

OHIO EXPECTED TO CAST RECORD VOTE TOMORROW

3,250,000 Due to Go to Polls In State; Bricker-Davey Race Tops Interest.

tentially a vital sector on the ballot front.

Republicans, banking on the rural vote, worried about possible adverse weather that might dampen their partisans' enthusiasm on election day.

The fight for offices in the state house, for Ohio congressional seats, the county courthouses, the judgeships and the state legislature, were pushed aside in popular attention to a great degree by the interest in the presidency, but have been no less intense and bitter.

Gov. John W. Bricker led the Republican state ticket, which is separate from the national ballot, seeking re-election against Martin L. Davey, twice governor of the state. If Bricker wins he will be the first Republican governor re-elected in nearly 40 years. If Davey is successful in his comeback he will be the third man in Ohio ever to have been governor three times.

Mayor Harold H. Burton, of Cleveland, carried the G. O. P. fight for U. S. senator against former Congressman John McSweeney, of Wooster, in the leading contest for representation in congress. Each party now has one senator. The Republicans have not had both places since 1930. Democrats cannot hope to do more than hold a 50-50 balance.

For the house, 24 seats were at stake. Sixteen of them are now held by the Republicans and eight by Democrats. Both places as congressman-at-large are now held by Republicans. The incumbents, George H. Bender, Cleveland, and L. L. Marshall, Euclid, were matched against former Congressman Stephen M. Young, Cleveland, and Francis W. Durbin, Lima, the Democratic aspirants.

For the first time in many years there are no minor parties on the ballot. Nor will the voter be asked to decide any statewide issue, such as a referendum or constitutional amendment. In every precinct, however, there will be at least three ballots—the short one with only the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates, the long state and county tickets, and the non-partisan judicial ballot.

Every state administrative or executive office is in contest. Republicans now hold every one except state auditor, occupied by Joseph T. Ferguson, Barberton, who is running for the auditor's four-year term against his predecessor, Joseph T. Tracy, Columbus. All other offices carry two-year terms.

Listed also on the state-county ballot will be the names of the candidates for district congressman in the voter's respective district and the nominees for the Ohio house and senate. Republicans four years ago elected 100 of the 136 house members and 27 of the 35 senators. This year 138 house seats will be voted on and 36 senate places.

Two full six-year terms on the Ohio supreme court and one unexpired term, running until Dec. 31, 1942, will be decided. For the term beginning Jan. 1, 1941 Clinton D. Boyd, Middletown, a Republican, is opposing Supreme Court Judge Charles B. Zimmerman, Springfield, a Democrat. For the full term beginning Jan. 2, the Republican nominee is former Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, Cincinnati. The Democrat is Judge McBride, Columbus. Supreme Court Judge Arthur H. Day, unsuccessful Republican candidate for the senatorial nomination in 1938, is running for this term also, having won nomination by petition. Party designations will not appear on the judicial ballot.

For the unexpired term of the late Judge George S. Myers, former Common Pleas Judge Edward C. Turner is the Republican candidate, opposing State Utilities Commissioner Dennis F. Dunlavy, of Ashtabula.

Besides the usual contests for local offices, voters also must settle local option campaigns in several communities and pass upon many proposed tax levies and bond issues, involving at least 300 which concern the schools.

CORRECTING AN ERROR IN SUNDAY'S NEWS-JOURNAL

In the "How to Vote for Willkie" advertisement published in Sunday's News-Journal by the Independent Association for Willkie, one of the Sample Ballots printed therein aligned the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates exactly wrong, that is Willkie and Wallace were paired and Roosevelt and McNary. This was due to a typographical error. The voting instructions were correct, however, because the President and Vice President run as a team, every vote for Willkie being as well a vote for McNary and every Roosevelt vote being a vote for Wallace, too. The advertisement below repeats and clarifies "How to Vote for Willkie" instructions.

If you mark an "X" in the circle on one side to show your party affiliations, and an "X" in the square on the other side to show that you are voting for the opposing candidate, your ballot will be thrown out.

This is in Direct Contrast to the familiar practice of "counter-marking" or "scratching." So to be sure and safe, follow one of the three samples shown below.

Rocks, Bottles Smash Windows at Johnny Appleseed

OFFICIALS FIND DESKS SCARRED, OTHER DAMAGE

Police Angered Over Acts of 'Malicious Vandalism' at New School.

There seemed to be no explanation today but outright vandalism for damage to the new Johnny Appleseed junior high school over the week-end.

School officials were incensed and police angered this morning when seven windows in the new building were found shattered. Detectives Lee J. Remy and Oscar Krupp were called to the school about 8 a. m. today when custodians found the windows broken.

They said several large rocks and bottles were found in the rooms on the ground level. The missiles had torn shades and damaged desks and blackboards.

Officers described the acts as "malicious," explaining that the rocks would have had to be hurled with severe force to cause the damage to the interior of the classrooms.

One of the stones, they said was about the size of a grapefruit. It scarred a desk and shattered the edge of the blackboard.

The school was opened early this year. It was one of two new junior high schools built at the cost of $400,000 apiece last year from funds derived from a $500,000 bond issue approved by the voters.

Armed Physician Proves He Meant No Harm to Willkie.

NEW YORK — (AP) — A 78-year-old physician has convinced authorities he meant no harm when he moved toward Wendell Willkie Saturday night at Madison Square Garden with a loaded gun in his pocket.

The aged man, Dr. Union S. Ward, who wore a large Willkie button when arrested, was released on $500 bail on a charge of violating the Sullivan anti-firearms law yesterday.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Rosenblum said police were satisfied the man was harmless.

Dr. Ward was quoted by police as saying he kept the weapon and two more found at home "for protection."

BOARD BEGINS BALLOT PROBE

'Official' Copies Are Found Circulated In Behalf of Clerk Candidate.

Balliet, chairman, said it was not likely that any further action will be taken.

"It was just a case of an overzealous campaigner trying a new stunt, probably without knowing how serious it was," Balliet said.

The ballots, exact copies of the originals, even down to the stamped signatures of election board members on the back, bore a rubber stamp copy of Wenning's signature opposite his name on the ticket.

"I did not see the ballots and I knew nothing of them until told about the stir that had been created before noon today," Wenning said.

"Naturally I wouldn't have permitted them to be used or my name to be stamped on them if I had known what they were," he added.

Wenning said Hipp borrowed the rubber stamp of his signature last night, explaining that he "wanted to use it on some sample ballots a printer left with me."

Election board officials, who were scheduled to meet this afternoon to determine what to do about the ballots, pointed out that a state law prohibits the use of copies of official ballots as samples, or even the use of white paper for copies.

The law also specifies that samples shall have the words "Sample ballot" stamped on them or it must be otherwise indicated that they are unofficial ballots.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1940.

After all, it's up to you to decide for whom you prefer to vote—that's the reason for the secret ballot.

An observer remarks that it is "people who live in glass houses" that seem most inclined to throw stones.

Four Ballots for Mansfield Voters

MANSFIELD voters will be handed four ballots tomorrow when they go to their polling places, each of which requires marking with a BLACK lead pencil to indicate preferences.

The national ballot, for president and vice president, carries the party emblems, an eagle and a rooster, and is voted by placing an "X" in the circle at the top OR an "X" in the box in front of the names of the preferred candidates.

Largest of the ballots is that for election of state, district and county candidates. To vote a mixed ticket place an "X" in the circle at the top of the preferred party and then mark an "X" in the box in front of the names of all candidates for whom you wish to vote on the other ticket. In a mixed ticket make sure that you mark an "X" in front of the names of BOTH of the candidates for county commissioner and state senator for whom you desire to vote.

The ballot for election of state supreme court, court of appeals and probate court judges is non-partisan and it is necessary to know the names of the candidates for whom you wish to vote. Mark an "X" in front of the name of ONE candidate for each of the three places on the supreme court; ONE for court of appeals, and ONE for probate judge.

Smallest ballot is that which presents the proposal for a one-mill tax levy for additional municipal funds for the police and fire departments, playgrounds, parks and airport improvements. Your vote on this question is indicated by an "X" in the box "For the tax levy" or "Against the tax levy."

Precinct polling places will be open from 6:30 a. m. until 6:30 p. m., and with the extremely heavy voting anticipated there will be an advantage in voting as early in the day as possible.

There is an indication of a number of close contests in Richland county and in the state. No person is justified in concluding that his or her vote will "make no difference" in the result. Every registered voter in Mansfield and every voter in Richland county, and over the entire state, should regard voting as tomorrow's most important job!

Fine Contribution To Scouting

RECOGNITION of the fine work that has been done by the Boy Scout organization in this city and vicinity is evidenced in the gift of a new camp site by Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Olson—just as it was seen a number of years ago when Charles F. Ackerman presented the Camp Avery Hand site as an essential to the early development of scouting in this vicinity.

The Boy Scout program, as it has been carried through in this area under the fine leadership of Floyd Dent, encouraged and assisted by a large group of interested citizens and volunteer workers, has exemplified as constructive a phase of community service as can be found anywhere.

It has combined physical and mental training in ways that have been effective in character building of the finest sort among highly diversified groups of boys in the impressionable years devoted to scouting.

A further expansion of activities, such as will be made possible by increased facilities to become available, will be gratifying to everyone who has had opportunity to learn of the benefits of scouting to all boys who come within its influence.

It is also gratifying to note that among the many unheralded benefactions of Mr. and Mrs. Olson this is one with which their name is permitted to be publicly associated.

Recognition of Heroic Act

LITTLE need be said about the award of a medal to Orra E. Robison, Mansfield man, in recognition of his heroism last April 27, when he rescued a mother and son from their burning automobile after an accident north of Mansfield.

Mr. Robison did not know—very few people knew—that immediately following the report of the occurrence in The News-Journal, this newspaper presented preliminary information to the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission in Pittsburgh and that the matter was later followed through with a complete record of the rescue after data had been gathered by Robert M. Miller, then assistant secretary of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce, who was delegated to the task.

Afterward, about two months ago, Irwin M. Urling, special agent of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, came to Mansfield on an unannounced visit, for a personal investigation and check-up of information to be considered at last week's meeting of the awards committee.

As was thought by The News-Journal at the time, this was one of those cases of disinterested heroism in which a life was risked to save others—an act for which the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission's awards are intended.

The News-Journal is glad that this well-deserved recognition has come to Mr. Robison—and glad to have had a small share in bringing his heroic act to the attention of the commission.

Discretion In Reading

WE HAVE more information than human beings ever possessed on affairs around the world, and we have less time for assimilation and understanding of what we think or know," says a writer in Editor & Publisher.

Yes—and no. We certainly have plenty of information, some of it contradictory, so that we feel we have to read most of it in order to balance things and get at the truth. But we really can have as much time as we want to take for assimilation and understanding.

It isn't necessary for any reader to read every word of news and every signed column in his daily paper or every article in his magazines. He is free to take from his own bookcase or from a public library some ancient but wise book and to read it for comfort or enlightenment. He may choose to take a turn in the park to commune with squirrels or trees or sunshine, or do a bit of gardening even if it is no more than raking up leaves and packing them firmly around the shrubs and rose bushes. These acts will not only further assimilation and understanding. They will refresh and strengthen, so that the next round of news, even bad news, may be an asset to intelligence, not just an added mental burden.

As working hours become shorter and shorter the unhappy thought arises that eventually there may be none at all.

Self-Destroying Device Claimed

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—The army has worked out a device which will destroy the famous bomb sight if anything should happen to the plane carrying it. Details of this device of course are shrouded in almost as much mystery as the bomb sight itself, but it is declared by those who know to be 100% effective.

The importance of this development cannot be exaggerated. It means that an enemy cannot obtain the priceless secret of the bomb sight no matter if they shoot down so many planes using it that a few of them, on the law of averages, would be bound to land with any particular part intact.

Experience in Britain has shown that many planes have been shot down, and yet grounded with so little injury that the gasoline in their tanks could be recovered. This interesting fact was disclosed when the British revealed that the Nazi planes were using a gasoline inferior to the ordinary gasoline sold to American motorists, a far cry from "aviation" gasoline.

The best illustration of this difference is that the United States government is still permitting shipment to Japan of ordinary gasoline—better than that used by the German planes—but that it has embargoed aviation gasoline.

THE most important point about the fact that we now have a device which will inevitably destroy the bomb sight if anything happens to the plane, and thus prevent capture of the secret by the enemy, is that the chief objection to giving the bomb sight to the British has disappeared.

In fact, there are many in Washington who believe implicitly that the British already have this bomb sight, though it is vigorously denied in official quarters. The rumor is, however, that it was given to the British just as soon as our own experts were SURE that the self-destructive device would certainly destroy the bomb sight if anything happened to the plane.

This would leave only one objection to permitting the British to have the bomb sight—accepting as a premise the contention that Britain is fighting our battle—that some Nazi agents might be able to obtain the sight once the scope of our own rigid protection of its secret was broadened as a result of its use by the British.

There would always be the danger, of course, that some Nazi spy would actually be a British pilot, and fly his plane to Germany and land with the device intact. There would be no way of preventing that save the vigilance of the British secret service in its examination of members of the Royal Air Force.

It may not be known for a long time yet whether the British really have the bomb sight. It certainly has not been true, as some writers have insisted, that the Germans already have obtained it. If they did have it, their attacks on Britain would have been much more effective in reaching military objectives.

SEVERAL things suggest themselves if the British have the bomb sight now, or if they get it in the near future. With their detailed plans of the oil fields of Roumania, for example, it would seem to be a simple matter for them to render them unworkable. This would be especially true if they also get the new flying fortresses.

More important, however, would be the effect of the bomb sight on attacks on German munition works and oil refineries.

Health and Diet

School Medical Service.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

LIKE all things in a democracy, school medical services should, besides their immediate objective of making the children physically fit, serve as an education in proper medical care.

This is pointed out by Dr. Charles C. Wilson, of Hartford, Conn., in contrasting the medical services in what he calls a Neanderthal school and a Utopian school.

On a visit to the Neanderthal school, you go to the principal's office, and ask to see how the health examinations are being conducted. The principal says he is not sure the school physician has come yet. "Sometimes he is late, and sometimes he does not come at all! He is such a busy man."

He takes you to the room where the examinations are to be held, and you find a mob of children milling around a nurse, who is making out some new cards. You express surprise that new cards are being made out for seventh grade pupils—thinking that cards showing previous examinations would be available—and she explains that in transfers or some other way a number of the cards got lost.

The nurse in answer to a question explains that parents are not invited to the examination.

The doctor enters hurriedly and says he has to leave early so we must get on with the examination. A child approaches, the doctor inserts a tongue depressor and says "This child has terrible tonsils; tell the mother they should be taken out," inserts his stethoscope between the child's clothing and the body, and says —"Next!" When you ask whether the pupil with the bad tonsils has had frequent colds or abscess the answers are not known and no plan is provided to secure such answers.

No Co-operation.

Going into a classroom you learn from the teacher that she is much relieved to know that the medical department is taking over all the health problems of her pupils, and that she does not have to bother. When you ask how many of her pupils have serious defects you learn the nurse has all the records and she never talks them over.

The boy holding the book close to his eyes may have something wrong with his eyes, but then that couldn't be because the nurse examined his eyes with a chart and said his eyesight was good. Yes some of the pupils should go to a dentist, but only one had toothache yesterday.

In the nurse's office, a number of children are waiting for attention. This one gets an aspirin for headache, this one oil of cloves for toothache, this one some sodium bicarbonate for indigestion, with the confidential advice to you that it is just a placebo.

In the Utopian School things are all different—there is coordination between the principal, the doctor, the nurse and the teacher. The pupils are treated like reasonable human beings. The parents are constantly consulted.

Pupils, parents and teachers get some respect for the value of a long-range health record. Physical defects are treated by searching for the cause, instead of smoothing them down with a placebo.

"The educative value of the health service program depends partly on the personality of the school personnel, and partly on the development of the 'art' side of medicine, in contrast to the 'science' side."

Emily Post's Views.

Editor News-Journal:

In our whole history, no election has ever brought out more clearly the far-seeing wisdom of Washington and Jefferson who themselves refused a third term because they feared that the setting of such a precedent might some day lead a man to consider himself as a monarch. Today's word for monarch is "dictator," and the threat is here.

At former presidential elections, we have known that if the candidate of our choice lost, we would have another chance in four years. This time I believe if Mr. Roosevelt is given a third term we may never again be permitted to decide between two candidates. This is why I myself shall prayerfully vote for Wendell Willkie.

Victory Against Greece Is Needed To Hold Faith of Italian People

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Upon the outcome of the war in Greece depend several things besides the question whether Hitler pushes on to Suez. Probably the most important is the war's effect upon the Italian people—especially in case of set-back or defeat.

For a long time, U. S. intelligence reports have indicated that Italy was the Achilles heel of the Axis and that the Italian people were none too enthusiastic about their partnership with Germany. Basically, the Italians always have sided more with Britain than with Germany. For years they had distrusted Germany, and for an equal number of years had done business with Great Britain.

Furthermore, the war has put a severe economic pinch on the Italian people. In return they have had no great victories and conquered no important territory. Hitler has been able to show new conquests to arouse the enthusiasm of the German people, but Mussolini has had nothing to show except Albania and British Somaliland.

Even the much-heralded advance of Marshal Graziani in Egypt now has bogged down on the sands of Sahara. So Mussolini needs a Greek victory and needs it badly. And if he does not get it, observers in Italy believe that dissatisfaction among the Italian people might become so great as to lead to a new dictator in Rome.

Note — Because of her vastly superior air force and more modern army, the odds are very much in favor of an Italian victory. Outcome of the war, however, depends on how much aid Greece can get from Britain, which cannot risk taking too many troops away from its Egyptian defenses; also whether Jugoslavia and Turkey come in.

Political Notes.

LITTLE has been heard of Alf Landon during the campaign, but the 1936 GOP standard bearer put in yeoman licks for his 1940 successor. Working quietly behind the scenes, Landon smoothed out factional clashes between the regular party organizations and Willkie clubs or other independent units in a number of states, and played a big part in lining up farm outfits. Landon deliberately kept himself in the background in order to be able to work more effectively as a trouble-shooting co-ordinator. . . . Because of the $3,000,000 Hatch Act limit, the final expenditures of the GOP campaign were borne by the Willkie Clubs instead of the national committee. The clubs paid for 14 coast-to-coast broadcasts, eight of them by Willkie himself.

John W. Davis.

MRS. A. MITCHELL PALMER, widow of Woodrow Wilson's wartime attorney general, was visiting friends on Long Island some time ago and went through all kinds of razzing because of her support for Roosevelt. It turned out that she was about the only Roosevelt fan among the elite social set.

One night she sat at dinner beside John W. Davis, candidate for president on the Democratic ticket in 1924, attorney for J. P. Morgan and a Willkie rooter.

"Peggy," queried Mr. Davis in slightly scorching tones, "if Mitchell Palmer were alive today do you think he'd support Roosevelt?"

"I don't know what Mitchell would do if he were alive," replied Mrs. Palmer. "But if he had ever run for president on the Democratic ticket, then I do know that he would always support the head of the party."

Next morning, John W. Davis remarked to Mrs. Palmer: "You know, Peggy, I couldn't sleep last night. You worried me to death."

Elliott Roosevelt.

THIS column in the past has rained a steady stream of criticism on the head of Elliott Roosevelt—on his early lobbying for Northwest Airways, on some of his radio activities and on his rows with his father's best friends in Texas.

However, we don't think the facts warrant the criticism which has been heaped on his head for becoming a captain in the technical end of the Air Corps. Real fact is that with two children and poor eyesight, Elliott never would have been drafted; and the lowest rank given in his branch of the Air Corps is that of captain.

Because he has become a national issue, we wrote to Elliott asking for his side of the story. Here is his reply:

"In 1928 I tried to go to Annapolis, but I was told that I could never go because of poor eyesight . . . As you know, I have had a business career since that was greatly helped by the fact of my being the son of a very prominent man . . . I've made mistakes, plenty of them, mistakes of judgment, but they were honest mistakes and when I realized them I set out to correct them.

"I 1938 I decided to get into the radio business in Texas working for myself. In that way I felt I had a better chance to keep away from political influences and implications, and at the same time build up a solid future for myself . . .

"Then the war came. I believe that my future, your future, the freedom of us all is in the balance, and I decided to offer my services for whatever they were worth. I didn't care whether I was a private or a general. I didn't care whether I was put into something as a civilian, if it was felt that in that way I could best help. Well, they took me into the service, as you know, in the Air Corps. And you doubtless know all the stuff that has come out since then.

"My God! I had no desire to become a spearhead of controversy. I wanted to help, not hinder by creating discord. Well, there isn't anything to be done about it now . . . I think there is only one course to follow—go ahead with my work and vindicate the judgment of those army officers who put me where I am, by doing a terrific job. Then if war does come, make sure that someway I get in where the fighting is heaviest.

"You know, many people have written me, called me, and wired me calling me a coward. I even get white feathers in the mail. I guess the only satisfaction I'll ever have with those people will be how they'll feel about their hard words if I should happen to be bumped off if there is a fracas. . . . This letter hasn't been easy to write, but I wanted you to know that down in my heart I wasn't trying to get glory, position or notice of any kind. I was trying to help."

U. S. Envoy To Rome.

MOST people don't know it, but the resignation of ethereal William Phillips as U. S. ambassador to Italy has been on Roosevelt's desk for some time. Ambassador Phillips, popular in Rome, has been ill and anxious to resign, remaining only at the presidents' behest and because of the emergency.

But now it is definitely decided that he will not return. However, because Roosevelt still feels that Italy can be the key to peace, he is sending, as Phillips' successor, Alexander Kirk, one of the most popular diplomats ever to serve in Rome.

Kirk lived in Rome for ten years, maintained three houses, entertained lavishly, came to have a tremendous number of Italian friends. He combined wealth, so necessary in the diplomatic service, with brains, so necessary but so rare.

Kirk will not have the rank of ambassador, though he may be promoted if a formula can be worked out whereby the United States does not have to recognize the conquest of Ethiopia.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Capital folk: (The National Police academy, sponsored by the federal bureau of investigation, gives a 12-week course of intensive instruction in modern police methods to a group of 40 men three times a year. There is no tuition fee, but traveling and living expenses of students must be paid by some one other than the government).

He was a heavy-set, dumpy deputy sheriff from the sagebrush country. He was terribly overweight and while it was expected that the NPA's daily hour of physical training would reduce his weight, in the ensuing weeks he became almost skinny.

His actions were called strange. Although he never missed a class, he never went to luncheon with his classmates and immediately the afternoon sessions were out he would hurry off by himself. The other members of the class dubbed him "the lone wolf"—made jokes about him, snickered behind his back.

Finally, the course was over and, on "graduation day," the Lone Wolf came into the office of the assistant director. He said: "There's something been worrying me. I know the fellows don't like me. They think I'm a queer guy, I guess. That's all right. I don't blame them. But I did feel kinda like some explanation was due you.

Tightened Belt.

"The truth is I had to mortgage my home to get enough money to pay my expenses here. I had to leave my family and some other relatives I'm kinda taking care of back home. It's been a little tough.

"When I got my budget all figured out, I found I just had 35 cents a day to buy meals while I was here. I didn't mind that for myself. Shucks, I had coffee and doughnuts for breakfast, soup for lunch, and I managed to get along for supper. But I couldn't stand for those other fellows to see me eating like that and I couldn't tell 'em where I was going for my meals.

"I guess it's what you call false pride. But that's the way it was, anyway. And I just figured I ought to tell you that I'm not really a strange guy and if I had it to do over again, I'd do it the same way because that's about the only way I could have got what the academy has to offer."

Don't Like the Water.

ONE of the stories coming from travelers returning from France is the new nickname with which the French (mostly in unoccupied France) have christened the Nazi troops lined up along the English channel waiting for invasion of England. The French call them "glug-glugs."

Here's the way it was explained to me. "The French say that the Nazis are very brave and their morale is very high and they are willing to face almost anything ON LAND that Der Fuehrer orders them into. But when it comes to getting out in that channel and getting boats shot from under them and going down with nothing more to say about it than 'glug glug,' they don't want any part of it."

One Misspelled Word.

THIS is a case of fiddling while the newspaper boys burned. At the Army the other day, it was announced that an important statement would be issued at 12 noon. The newsmen notified their desk and gathered around by the scores when noon came. Two hours later, the irritated, restless, hungry press was handed the belated announcement.

One of the boys asked a stenographer what had happened. She looked both ways and then whispered: "We misspelled the word 'airport' and had to do the whole darn thing over again."

Concord Grapes

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WE PICKED grapes on a neighboring hillside the other morning. The sun came over the hills and warmed us at our work. Dead ripe, the heavy, luscious purple clusters hung, from trellised vines, the leaves yellowed and withered by frost. The brittle stems snapped in our fingers, and the rare odor of fruit on which Nature has completely finished her work, invited one to breathe deep and enjoy its winelike perfume.

At the end of the row I paused and looked off across the valley. Long rows of corn shocks with heaped up gold between; turkeys, ducks and guineas strutting, and calling from barnyards; the smell of frost and fallen leaves, and the blaze of hardy chrysanthemums beside the fence; the untouched misty bloom on the purple globes of grape, clinging with tight tendrils to the parent stalk; the gleam of golden pumpkins off among the corn.

Harvest time is past. Winter came for a day and will soon return. This last bit of autumn is the overflow of nature's cup—like the grapes we picked, it leaves an even sweeter, more satisfying flavor of memory than earlier days before the killing frost.

We carried heaped up baskets down the hill and drove slowly home. On the long table, in our cellar, I set the grapes beside other baskets of bright red apples and stopped to admire and sniff again. A farm cellar is an interesting place this time of year. A man's nose can be, sometimes, a joy to him.

Today my wife was busy with cans and press. She had ordered an extra bag of sugar, and coaxed all youthful hands into service at stemming grapes. Tonight a row of jars of jelly, juice and conserve stand proudly on a cellar shelf. Only a few of the largest purple clusters are left in a basket —"for you to smell," she said.

Every member of our family has stained lips and teeth. We hear the patter of rain begin on our cottage roof, and are content. Some of the joy of that late harvest of the vine will remain here throughout the winter

AVIATION NEWS—

START FLIGHT TRAINING FOR TEN THIS WEEK

Winter Ground School Classes Planned at Senior High; Ninth Plane Here.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS.

Flight training for 10 youths who recently were awarded scholarships at the completion of the C. P. T. ground school will be started Saturday at municipal airport, James R. Harrington, the government's instructor announced today.

Flight schedules were being worked out for the students as plans went forward for conducting a winter ground school at the Senior high school.

Mansfield chapter of the National Aeronautical association, sponsor of the program here, already has 75 applicants for classroom work but seeks at least 50 more.

The chapter hopes to get the school started within the next two weeks in order to complete the 12-week instruction by Feb. 1. It is expected that the group will be divided into two classes, each meeting two nights a week.

Scholarships will be awarded the 10 top ranking students for flight training which will begin about Feb. 15.

Carl L. Austin, Jeromesville, received his wings yesterday after successfully passing his flight test for a private license, according to Harrington.

He was the eighth of the original class of C. P. T. students who started instruction last spring. Louis Nixon, and the lone girl in the class, Betty Thompson, are expected to take their examinations this week.

Charles Silsby, who recently took his written examination for an instructor's rating has filed his application to attend a government refresher school, probably at Columbus, where he hopes to get his license and then return to assist in tutoring C. P. T. students.

Another plane—the ninth—is now hangared at the port. It is a new Luscombe Silvaire cabin monoplane, flown in yesterday by Tom Jones from the factory.

The pilots at the port made quiet a celebration of Jones' return, three of them going to Akron to meet him.

Mrs. Jones flew to the Rubber City with Norm Kann, N. A. A. president, and joined her husband there.

Piloting the other two ships were Dr. L. D. Bonar and Ralph Shelton.

Flying through with Jones were two other planes, both of which hangared at the port last night.

They were flown by C. G. Hudson of Denver, and H. W. Wright of Cheyenne, Wyo. They took off this morning for their home ports.

Harrington in the meantime hopped in his Stinson and met the six ships half way between Mansfield and Akron. All seven flew into the port in formation.

Aviation is one place where the instructor as well as the student is on his toes.

Harrington has been instructing C. P. T. students for months in just what to do in the event of a forced landing. Monday he got caught in one of the predicaments himself.

Flying to Chicago with Mrs. Harrington, his ship developed motor trouble near Cleveland and Harrington set the big monoplane down in a hay field.

It was on the Grafton prison farm of the Ohio State reformatory that he made the landing. As he jolted to a stop Mrs. Harrington, who does not fly frequently with her husband, remarked that the field appeared a great deal smoother than the Mansfield port.

Harrington continued by auto to Cleveland and then took a transport to the Windy City.

A phone call to the local port took Paul Gimbel to the ship. He repaired the damage—a broken valve—and flew back to Mansfield.

As 'Empress Of Britain' Burned And Sank After Nazi Attack

This is the first picture to reach the United States of the stricken British liner, Empress of Britain, burning fiercely as she is towed by another British ship. While being towed, the 42,348-ton Empress, set afire by a Nazi bombing plane, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. Forty-five of the 643 aboard were lost. The photo was made by an amateur photographer aboard one of the escorting British vessels.

ROOSEVELT IN FINAL APPEALS

Arrives at Hyde Park, Makes Six Neighborhood Talks; On Radio Tonight.

third member of the firm of "Martin, Barton and Fish" upon whom he had been drumming in the past week.

Mr. Roosevelt scheduled five "three-minute" speeches in Dutchess, Orange, Putnam and Ulster counties of his vitally contested home state, all leading up to the final radio message he will deliver to the electorate tonight at 11:10 p. m., E.S.T.

In the presidential auto will be riding Hardy Steeholm, Democratic candidate for congress against Fish. Mr. Roosevelt planned not only a series of plugs for his own re-election, but also for the defeat of Fish, a consistent opponent of his foreign policies.

The chief executive left Washington last night following a full Sunday afternoon of conferences with Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles.

Movement of American destroyers to the vicinity of Martinique, West Indies island possession of the defeated Vichy government of France probably was under discussion, but no statement was forthcoming from any of the three. Martinique falls in the scope of the Havana conference and Monroe doctrine declarations that sovereignty of the western hemisphere must remain intact, regardless of the European war. The president called Hull early this morning.

Still militantly pushing his bid for a third term, the president's own election eve activity left him little respite. Disembarking this morning the special train that in a week's time has carried him through the vital states of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Connecticut, he announced the following schedule of three-minute speeches:

Beacon, Putnam county seat, 2:25 p. m.

Newburg, Orange county seat, 2:50 p. m.

Rhinebeck, 4:30 p. m.

Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county seat, 6:00 p. m.

The Poughkeepsie speech will be the president's last public appearance, and will be delivered from the marquee of the Nelson house, same spot from which in 1936 he wound up his campaign.

Official members of the presidential party were confident that Mr. Roosevelt's appeal for a "vote of confidence" would be rewarded at the polls tomorrow to the point of making last minute wagers.

The man who seeks an unprecedented third term will vote tomorrow around noon at the Hyde Park town hall and then return to his family home to await the results. As usual, the president will set himself up an office in the family dining room, just off of which will be ticking in the returns on three press association wires.

Just before he left Washington last night, the president issued a statement urging all qualified voters to go to the polls. He announced that federal employes would be given time off to exercise their franchise and urged that state and local governments do likewise.

"It is a duty of the nation that every citizen should exercise the solemn right of suffrage guaranteed under the constitution," he said.

Little Jealousy Shows Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Haven't you often wished that your husband wouldn't act quite so much as though he owned you? That he wouldn't watch your comings and goings so carefully? Or makes scenes when you dance too long with other men? Or object when your clothes are rather gay or your make-up a shade too vivid?

That young husband of yours is disposed to be a little jealous. It fusses you, I'm sure — and you'd like me to tell you what you can do to smooth these annoyances out of your life.

It goes without saying that you want him to love you. Just enough, perhaps, to be a pleasure and a flattery, but not enough to be a burden and an embarrassment, or to stand in the way of your complete freedom.

You want him to admire and approve of you, whatever you may say or do or wear. You want him to feel a constant urge to give you just a little more money than he can afford.

You want him to relieve you of pretty nearly every domestic burden. But you don't ever want to be the victim of his masculine jealousy.

My dear children — for your name is legion—what you want is impossible. A man who is genuinely in love with his wife is pretty likely to demand that she display no interest in other men, or make obvious efforts to attract them.

If the wife is selfish and coquetish, and doesn't try to meet his wishes, should a wounded husband suffer in silence? Anyway, he doesn't. He's jealous and can't help showing it. Before you know it, there's a domestic scene.

I can't defend jealousy. It isn't a lofty emotion, and doesn't show itself in pretty ways. But it can't be wished away. Where love is, particularly the love felt by a husband, jealousy is more than likely to reveal itself, no matter in how faint a tinge.

If you want your marriage to be happy, it's your job first of all, not to provoke jealousy. If, in spite of everything it manifests itself, it's likewise your job to learn to soothe it.

When Bill's happiness and peace of mind depend entirely upon you, doesn't that very fact make you feel tender and indulgent, so that you can smile and humor his little outbreaks?

Suppose he didn't love you, or care what you did or how you looked or whom you smiled at? Wouldn't your days be long and cold and the world a desert? A man who takes a woman into his inmost heart offers her a warm, sweet nest to live in. Jealousy? She should learn its lessons.

All letters sent to Beatrice Fairfax requesting a personal answer should enclose a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope. Readers who expect an answer to their problems in the Fairfax column in this paper, should allow an adequate margin of time between receipt of letter by Miss Fairfax and final publication.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"In the living room," I told Philip, voicing a decision I already had made.

"Thank you," he said, and I guessed he was finding speech difficult.

"Come with me, Avis," he directed, and the two went into the living room, closing the doors after them. Almost at once the telephone from the guardhouse rang again.

"Two boys who say they are your nephews ask to come in," the guard said, and again my father's voice spoke from his extension.

"Bring them to the side door for identification," he commanded. "Send three men with them. Mr. Underwood will be right down."

It was but a few minutes later, although it seemed an eternity, before Harry Underwood at the door ushered in Bill and Hank, plainly in a state of excited tension. Their eyes roved searchingly over the room before they rushed up to me.

"Has Avis Arlen come here yet?" Bill demanded in a whisper.

"Yes, she has," I returned. "She's in the library with Mr. Veritzen."

"Then we're too late," Hank said despondently. "We hoped we'd beat her out here, so she wouldn't come in."

"It's all right," I assured him. "We know she's up to some mischief, and Grandpa Spencer is keeping her here to watch her. Now come into the dining room and have something to eat, and tell me what you've discovered. Katie is in the kitchen, but you can keep your voices low so she won't hear you."

It was a strange story that they unfolded.

Bill was trying to call the farmhouse, and by some error of the operator he was put upon a line over which Avis Arlen was talking to some man whom they did not know, but who, I readily surmised, was Jack Leslie.

"You know what you're going to do, don't you, sweetheart?" the man had said. "You're going out to the Graham farmhouse"—at this point William strangled his gentlemanly instinct to put back the receiver and, instead, listened shamelessly.

"Ask for Philip Veritzen," the man had gone on. "He'll be there, and he'll vouch for you. He has to. Hear what he has to tell you, and then wait your chance to let me in as I have planned. Do you understand?"

"Oh! perfectly, darling!" Avis had trilled, and the boys had lost no time in getting started for the farm.

"What does it all mean, Auntie Madge?" they asked. I explained about the siege as best I could, and told them my father would assign them to places upstairs, as they must not go near the children until they were sure they had no fever germs in them.

"May we talk to you a minute first?" Hank asked hesitantly, and when I had said, "Of course," Bill slid out of the room, saying simply: "Hank's all right, and he wants to tell you about it." Then Hank came over to me, and kissed me with warm, loving gratitude, and as he rushed on into boyish, awkward speech, I cast away the fear for the boy's future which had been mine for so long.

"I certainly was on an awfully wrong track," Hank said ruefully. "I didn't exactly like to see things suffer, but I was curious to see how long they'd stand it.

"But that doctor chap showed me just where I was coming out, and that play I saw with you finished it up. I know now just where I stand, and I'm watching myself all the time. And I've asked old Bill to help watch. I'm going to be all right, always. You'll see!"

"I know you are, Hank," I said gently. "But don't overdo the watching over yourself. You mustn't get morbid."

"I won't," he said, but I found I could not make myself the same promise as the night wore on with no sign of Dicky.

Harry Underwood came down the stairs.

"The Chief wants you and Lil," he said and, turning, went up the stairs again with his lazy-looking lope that beats the walkng gait of any two average men.

I wakened Lillian without disturbing any one save Katherine, whom we signaled to lie down again. When we came into his room, my father, Harry Underwood and Philip Veritzen were grouped directly opposite Avis Arlen, who sobbing but defiant, was sitting in a big armchair.

"I've told you all I know," she said.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Nov. 5.

A DAY IN which spectacular heights may be reached, with decisive and surprising crises, if backed up by dynamic force and drastic measures, is forecast by the exciting chain of planetary configurations. It is probable that the unexpected, unpredictable and unprecedented may occur, having profound and far reaching effect on the life, its aims and achievements. Brilliant coups may be expected from highly stimulated and tense springs of imagination, inspiration or ingenuity in which the creative abilities may function in any number of cultural forms. Sensational public acclaim may cap such dramatic climax with much personal gratification.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves deep in a year of spectacular achievements, with unprecedented public recognition or reward. These coming because of some extraordinary or brilliant creation in the field of science, invention, discovery, art, music or drama, as subtle, impressionable, intuitive and image-creating forces and faculties are under exceedingly vibrant stimuli for expression in an unusual way. The mentality as well as the emotional urges are indomitable and insistent. Great personal joy stems from this, affecting the entire life and its fortunes.

A child born on this day may be highly gifted with creative faculties, brilliant, dynamic and irresistible. Some sensational expression in science, art, drama, romance or adventure may plunge it in the limelight with public popularity and appreciation.

Don't Nag Slow Child

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

It is discouraging to the parents when their child lags or fails at school. More discouraging, however, to the child. This second fact parents are prone to overlook. Therefore, they tend to scold the lagging child and charge him with laziness. If only they could, even for a few minutes, be in the child's place, just to get his feelings, they would do very differently.

Of course, if the child runs about at night when he has home assignments from school, he just won't have time to get these lessons. The problem then for the parents is not to hound the child about the lessons but to cultivate in him the habit of being home on nights before school and going at his home work at a regular time and place. With some children in school it may be too late to re-establish these good habits. If their parents can do nothing about these habits how much less can they do about the lessons? The obvious warning is to parents of younger children to make sure adequate controls will have been established early.

Don't Nag.

Under no conditions can the parent hope to help the child improve in his work at school by scolding and nagging at him about it.

If you really want to help this child learn from his teachers, or from an expert, just what can be done at home to contribute to his success at school. Say the child is in the fourth or fifth grade. Is his trouble in reading, spelling, arithmetic?

If in arithmetic, about the first thing to ascertain is whether he has learned by heart the simple 100 basic addition facts and the 100 basic subtraction facts, as 7 and 9 are 16, 8 from 13 leaves 5. So long as he counts or guesses in relation to the facts his troubles will continue. In order to help him, you will induce him to memorize these factes, just as he memorizes the multiplication facts a few an evening.

Maybe he has not yet caught on to the process of hard subtraction, hard addition, or long division. If not, you might, if you are poised and serene, show him in an evening or two, by working calmly and patiently a few samples with him. Likewise you might help him with specific troubles in fractions, denominate numbers, percentage.

Or, his arithmetic might be with verbal (reading) problems. If so, the chances are he is a poor reader or so much in haste that he doesn't take time enough to read the problem carefully, but hurriedly looks from one number to another among the words and guesses it is add, substract, multiply, or "guzinto."

Parent Control.

Anyway, the average parent who is self-controlled, poised and patient, who never lets the voice rise, nor ever feels angry at the child with trouble in arithmetic, might easily be able to locate this child's difficulty and help him overcome it.

Of course, any parent who can read fairly well can easily find out if the child has trouble in reading. No standard test will be needed. If this child must pause, stutter and stumble over every few words it is clear that what he is trying to read is too hard for him. But this may be the book or assignment for this child's grade. No matter. He will not improve much in reading through the torture of trying to read from such. Find materials that are easy enough for him to read, that also will be interesting to him. Better still, if you can induce him to read aloud to a child under six to entertain that child.

You may have any one of the following by writing me at 235 East 45th Street, N. Y. City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

1—The 100 addition and 100 subtraction facts.

Beauty Care for Small Fry

By MME. QUI VIVE

When mama goes to the pulchritude works to get put through the hopper, she takes little daughter with her. The beauty industry is making a bid for juvenile patronage, have special departments for the young fry. Very interesting. The rooms are decorated with Mother Goose characters, chairs, table and shampoo bowls are arranged to fit the size of the tabloid customers. Story books and toys are at hand for their amusement.

The idea appeals strongly to the mama person. She has wrestled with little Annabelle's hair until she is a first-class wreck. The mention of a shampoo sends Annabelle into pouting sullenness or screaming tantrums. By force or through bribery the child is got into the bath tub the suds is foamed upon her head, the spray used with more or less success, though less. The result is not satisfying or gratifying.

In the beauty shop Annabelle behaves like an angel and is well. Her hair gets a good scrubbing, there is no tax on mama's nervous system. The operator chucks and coddles and finally gives Annabelle to understand that the operator must send for an expert.

Presently the expert appears and the scrubbing is started all over again. Annabelle is normally quiet. She is interested in the suds and the rubbing, but she soon tires of both.

It takes a great deal of patience to give a wave, two curls must be set at a time, and Annabelle is not a patient person. Well, it's over, and Annabelle is a new child. It is usually in point that children's fingers are crossed behind the proper care if they are to develop normally and retain their strong parkers.

Hair dressing for the small fry is a problem to many parents. The usual arrangement is in bangs, two fat little braids tied with ribbons are becoming to many little girls. Of course dresses the Goddess Hygeia does not approve, they are dust catchers. Mother finds they need frequent attention or her darling child will sport a head like a floormop.

There's a difference of opinion as to whether or not a child should have a permanent wave. No harm is done to the growth. If the waved locks have daily attention, being brushed around the finger, all right and good. Only a mother with leisure will find time for these attentions. In the rush of getting daughter off to school, ringlets are a bother.

With all the good work that is going on in the way of health measures, little daughter is getting a good start along the beauty way. Medical examinations once or twice a year, dental attentions, the balanced diet! Grand for the coming generations.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

by Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

RIGHT INTO THE JAWS

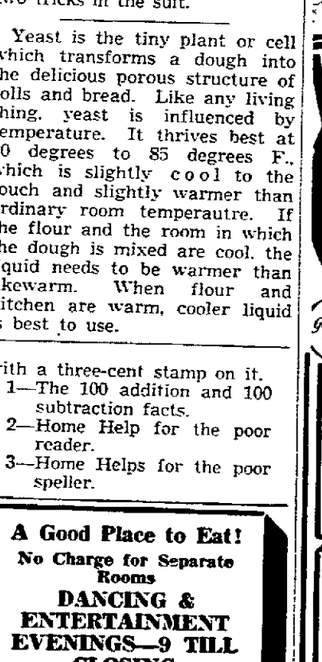
FINESSING is usually somewhat of a gamble. If the missing honor is held by the opponent who plays first to the trick the finesse succeeds. But if it is held by the one who plays last the finesse is a failure. Always conscious of this fine players try to avoid finesses whenever they can. They prefer instead to construct a lead-throwing end-play which eliminates such a risk if the hand offers an opportunity for it. By means of this play the lead comes up to the tenace so that, even if a trick would have been lost by the finesse, that loser is prevented.

The two principal kinds of situations for such a play are illustrated by this lineup.



Suppose South is playing at No Trumps, or at clubs with all of the trumps played, and there are just three cards left in each hand, the lead being in the dummy. Suppose in the first case the outstanding cards, aside from the spades are the hearts shown. It is clear that if the declarer tries the hear finesse it will lose to West and the declarer consequently will get only one more trick, with the heart A. But if he leads the spade to West, the latter must then lead away from his heart K into the A-Q, declarer therefore getting two tricks.

Changing the lineup, so that the remaining cards, aside from spades, are the diamonds shown, we have what has been described as a "combination tenace." That is a suit which possesses one honor in one hand opposite a secondary honor in the other. In this case it is quite clear that South has no way to even seek two tricks in the diamond suit by leading it except through an effort to drop a singleton K. But by the lead-thrower he can make two tricks. When he leads his spade to West, the latter must return either the diamond J for the Q to win or the K to be killed by the A. In either event South takes two tricks in the suit.

Yeast is the tiny plant or cell which transforms a dough into the delicious porous structure of rolls and bread. Like any living thing, yeast is influenced by temperature. It thrives best at 80 degrees to 85 degrees F., which is slightly cool to the touch and slightly warmer than ordinary room temperautre. If the flour and the room in which the dough is mixed are cool, the liquid needs to be warmer than likewarm. When flour and kitchen are warm, cooler liquid is best to use.
